Carmel drops lawsuit against water district; in turn city gets 100 acre feet more water

By NANCY HILLS

TO THE joy of some and distress of others, the city of Carmel and Monterey Peninsula Water Management District drew up an agreement in which Carmel drops its lawsuit against the district for at least a year and adds 100 acre feet to Carmel's allocation.

The action, signed at the Monterey

Since the lawsuit was dismissed "without prejudice," Carmel can refile at the end of the year if it feels it is necessary.

The agreement dictates that Carmel will comply with the outcome of the EIR, which could recommend lowering, raising or maintaining the district's total water production limit. It could also recommend a redistribution of the 18,600 acre feet divided among the district's jurisdictions.

The new agreement raises that limit to 18,700 acre feet. Other communities can now "borrow" water until production reaches 18,700 acre feet.

However, meters that are set will probably have a vested interest and cannot be removed or shut off.

The agreement comes less than a month after the water board voted to give Carmel 145 acre feet when and if a proposed reclamation plant is constructed.

The plant, which could be ready in 1990, would provide reclaimed water for Del Monte Forest golf course irrigation, freeing about 436 acre feet for reallocation among the water district's communities. The county also gets 145 acre feet from the project and the rest is divided between the remaining five cities.

Three members of the Seaside City Council protested the agreement at the water board meeting Monday night.

Additionally, Pacific Grove Mayor Morris Fisher read a letter from the PG

County Courthouse Tuesday afternoon, gives Carmel 100 acre feet from the district's drought reserve or buffer until an EIR is completed on the allocation system, a solution resisted by the former water management district board.

The action was hailed as a new era of cooperation by Mayor Clint Eastwood and water board chairman Nick Lombardo. However, it prompted others, notably water board Director Dick Heuer and former director Patricia Bernardi, to charge that the district board has given into political pressure and, from Bernardi's perspective, the power of Eastwood's fame.

The city of Seaside, which is at about 95 percent of its allocation, conducted a closed session Wednesday to discuss the settlement.

In the agreement, Carmel gets the water added to its allotment until an EIR on the allocation system is completed. That EIR must be finished by Dec. 31, 1988 according to the agreement. It gives the district time to finish the report rather than have to meet a July deadline.

Carmel is currently using about 98 percent of its 1,031 acre feet allocation.

The district had started the EIR last year, but the administrative draft of the report was unsatisfactory to the board and members voted to start again.

The agreement replaces another one created last year that allowed any jurisdiction to "borrow" 100 acre feet from the unused portion of the water distributed between the district's cities and Monterey County.

Lombardo, who was elected chairman Monday night, stated he was "personally pleased that this was resolved" because the board wishes to settle its community activities without lawsuits.

"The credit should go to Clint," he said.

Eastwood, in his turn, praised the new board leadership.

"I believe the current water board leadership can find solutions to problems and get on with carrying out its role of water management," Eastwood said.

He added the settlement takes the pressure off the district to complete the EIR by July and gives them some "breathing room."

The peninsula mayors had supported this solution last year in a letter to the district board, Eastwood pointed out. He added that the 145 acre feet from the reclamation is a long way off and is a not a "fait accompli".

Carmel requested that the 100 acre feet come from the drought reserve because the city "didn't want to get into it with other jurisdictions" by taking water away from their allocations, Eastwood said.

"If we borrow it, how can we pay it back?" he added.

"We weren't asking for the moon," he said, referring to negotiations prior to and following Carmel filing the lawsuit in November 1986.

Carmel is a special case, Eastwood said, since no other jurisdiction is as close to using its allocation as Carmel.

Carmel may revise its current water ordinance, Eastwood said, which now does not allow construction that is deemed to increase water use in town.

"We're not going to go on a building spree," he added. "We'll continue with water conservation."

"It's been very hard on the residents not to be able to build a bathroom," while residents of other cities can, he said.

Water board director and former board chairman Dick Heuer, however, said he voted against the settlement in closed session for two reasons.

"This 100 acre feet and along with 145 acre feet from the reclamation project constitutes a 24 percent increase in Carmel's water allocation," Heuer said. "That is grossly in excess of Carmel's need. You need to ask if Carmel's general plan really provides for a 24 percent increase in residences and in businesses?"

Secondly, he said, there are environmental reasons.

"This comes from an increase in the entire allocation," Heuer said.

Heuer, who was re-elected last November, has often stated that the current pumping of the Carmel Valley aquifer is causing severe environmental damage. The board could have continued the agreement reached last year to borrow the water from the unused portion of the 18,600 acre feet without increasing it by another 100.

'The one thing I find distressing is that we have a star-struck audience that makes it possible for a man who has the power and stage presence to unduly influence local politics for the fear that he will use that influence and his fiscal resources to oppose them personally.'

— Patricia Bernardi

The allocation EIR, he said, may reverse the increase but "these pressures will exist at that time (when the board certifies the EIR) that exist now."

"This is an omen of things to come," Heuer said.

"Carmel Valley — look out," former water board director Patricia Bernardi said Wednesday. "The foxes are truly loose in the chicken house."

"Apparently, to appease a larger-than-life image (Eastwood), the water management board will yield to whatever pressure is applied," she said.

The action could set a precedent, Bernardi said, and other cities — such as Seaside — could file for more water. More pumping will lead to more environmental damage, she said, and the 100 acre feet comes from drought reserve which belongs to everyone.

Carmel is now getting the "lion's share" the water, she said. Bernardi added that she feels Carmel's allocation does need an adjustment, but it should wait until the EIR is finished.

"The one thing I find distressing is that we have a star-struck audience that makes it possible for a man who has the power and stage presence to unduly influence local politics for the fear that he will use that influence and his fiscal resources to oppose them personally," she said.

"The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District should be working out solutions for the entire district rather than caving in to one jurisdiction," she added.

City Council to the board protesting the proposed settlement at the Monday board meeting, stating that he hoped the board would not take the 100 acre feet from anyone else's allocation. Fisher read the letter at the beginning of the meeting, before the board had gone into closed session.

Five members of that council were in attendance at the meeting.

CARMEL MAYOR Clint Eastwood and water board chairman Nick Lombardo both praised each other's role in the agreement.

Hearing set for Jan. 20

Planners to consider adoption of general plan

By NANCY HILLS

THE LONG-AWAITED adoption hearing for the revised Carmel General Plan is just around the corner for the Carmel Planning Commission.

After 17 meetings on the proposed document in the past year, the planning commission will look at a draft document and decide if it is ready to send on to the city council.

The commission will conduct a public hearing on the proposed changes at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 20 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

The completed draft is minus the Housing Element since many changes are needed to comply with state regulations; the planning commission decided to deal with it as a separate issue.

The commission's draft is a reworking of the one currently used by Carmel, approved in 1984, and revisions suggested by the General Plan Review Committee.

The committee's draft of the much-debated city "constitution," as it is referred to by many, provoked fractious discussions, spawned reams of paper and filled Sunset Center's Carpenter Hall with capacity crowds.

Most of the public comment about the plan at meetings focused on strong objections to a loosening of restrictions of the 1984 edition, targeting proposed changes in the Land Use Element in particular.

Members of the committee responded by stating the current general plan is unnecessarily punitive and was the basis for much of the city's conflict and controversy in the past two years. The committee's revisions left the city's protections intact while being more flexible, they said.

During the planning commission's review, many of items removed by the General Plan Review Committee were reinstated, though the language may have been changed.

Whether this version of the plan will engender as much interest as the one submitted by the committee is still unknown.

The review committee, which consisted of Councilman Bob Evans as chairman, planning commissioners Olof Dahlstrand and Ed Hicks, resident Jean Grace and resident and owner of Carmel Development Co., Alan Williams, completed its work in February.

AN INITIAL environmental study of the planning commission's draft gives high marks to a reformatting that the planning staff did of the document and states that "overall, the (planning commission) revision retains the majority of the 1984 plan's policies."

Key to this conclusion is that the plan does not call for a change in zoning or expansion of the commercial district, Stephanie Strelow of Denise Duffy & Associates explained. Strelow conducted the analysis and compiled the study for the Duffy firm.

Strelow said she did not compare the commission's draft with the general plan committee's proposed changes.

The Duffy report evaluation of individual elements states that in the important Land Use element, the primary changes from the 1984 general plan are the elimination of policies that separately regulates Ocean Avenue and policies to reduce specific tourist-oriented business.

However, the study states that the revised element does add a new policy "which seeks to ensure that the special and unique character of Ocean Avenue and the adjoining commercial area is protected through administration of land use policies."

Also, the plan contains the "addition of several new policies that seek to maintain a mix of commercial uses that are compatible with Carmel's residential village character.

"A new objective seeks to protect and enhance the balanced mix of uses in the central business area, particularly along Ocean Avenue, to ensure a high quality, pedestrian-oriented commercial environment providing a wide variety of goods and services to local residents."

That mix should be reviewed periodically, the plan directs.

Specifically, the study states "a new policy has been added to limit the number of uses in commercial districts selling food for immediate consumption by pedestrians (i.e., restaurants, bakeries, delicatessens and specialty food stores), to reduce the generation of litter."

Overall, the Duffy report analysis of the planning commission's changes to the Land Use Element states that "the revised element continues to seek to preserve and maintain the predominant residential character of the city at the prevailing land use goal."

It adds there is no suggestion in the element of zoning changes, such as the expansion of the commercial district.

"The revision continues to call for limiting commercial activity both as to its scope and physical land spread," the Duffy study states.

The study does not address changes of zoning within the commercial district itself.

Policies on Mission Ranch were included in both the committee's and commission's version of the plan, the study stated. The policies were included by the general plan committee.

The policy "requires adoption of a specific plan for the Mission Ranch and Hodges properties prior to annexation that would maintain the economic viability of the existing commercial uses on the Mission Ranch, accommodate compatible additional development on the Hodges property and preserve the wetlands."

In the analysis section of the study on development, Strelow states that "additional development could occur on Mission Ranch and the adjacent Hodges property."

In the residential district, Strelow writes that there are policies that "continue to allow existing public and quasi-public land uses (i.e. churches and Carmel Foundation) in the R-1 district, but limit their expansion, control design and minimize impacts on the neighborhood, with a prohibition against establishment of new facilities."

The study does not address changes proposed in the residential design review policies.

One change from the 1984 plan's version of the same policy, "public" views are specified. In the 1984 version, the generic term "views" is used.

Policies regarding design review in the residential district also have undergone a change. Rather than specifying control of "excessive scale and bulk of structures in the residential districts" by means of design review, currently conducted by the planning commission, the draft plan switches the onus of control to zoning ordinances that outline setbacks, lot coverage, mass and height regulations.

The new plan does state that the planning commission should review "proposed developments in the residential area that involve severe slopes, large structures or unusual design..."

One important change may be the inclusion of a policy that mandates second floor construction in the commercial district be for residential use only.

Since second-story additions are a major area of future development in Carmel, the directive that new construction should all be residential could have important repercussions.

All other elements, with the exception of the Significant Buildings Element, have minor changes, according to the report.

Good reviews in for planners' version of general plan

By NANCY HILLS

BOTH opponents and proponents of either the 1984 Carmel General Plan or changes to it proposed by the General Plan Review Committee found a happier medium in the version prepared by the Carmel Planning Commission.

Critics of the first revision by the General Plan Review Committee and committee members alike feel that the commission's rewrite has reached a relatively good balance between the different points of view, though some concerns on both sides remain.

The planning commission will conduct a public hearing on the document and consider its adoption at 3 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 20 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

The version the commission will review is a reworking of both the 1984 plan that the city now uses and the changes proposed by the General Plan Review Committee.

A reformatting of the general plan received rave reviews by everyone The Carmel Pine Cone interviewed, but many expressed a disappointment that the Housing Element, which requires major changes, will not be ready for the meeting.

However, the rest of the plan seemed to reduce complaints expressed in and out of public meetings about the one proposed by the review committee as well as the current plan.

"I read it (the commission's revision) over very carefully," General Plan Review Committee Chairman and Councilman Bob Evans said. "And looking at it objectively, on the whole, I'm very impressed."

"I'm in favor of things that are workable," Evans said, adding that he felt this draft is workable.

Evans said that's precisely what he objected to about the 1984 version, that it was not a workable document.

There are some "minor changes" he would like to see, he said, but would reserve comment on them until it comes to the Carmel City Council for review.

A great deal of work has gone into this version, Evans said, from the time put in by the General Plan Review Committee to the time the planning commission and public dedicated to it.

"I think that debate was very useful," he added.

Planning commissioner Howard Nieman, a severe critic of the review committee's draft and the 1984 plan, was much happier with the planning commission's rewrite.

"I think the plan as revised by the planning commission is very good. It's substantially better than the plan proposed by the review committee, which I felt did not reflect the values and opinions of the community at all," he said.

The review committee's draft, Nieman added, had limited public participation — if any at all.

"The committee was not accountable directly to the community," he said.

"The review committee sought to weaken or soften those policies which impose burdens on property owners or developers but are nevertheless necessary to protect the community," Nieman added.

The commission encouraged public participation and many of its comments and concerns were included in their version of the plan, he said.

Nieman cites the reinstatement of policies for residential design review, policies relating to the commercial district and a "strengthening of the language" as examples of items he feels makes the commission's plan more responsive to the town's concerns.

However, Nieman added, he would like to see stronger residential design review policies.

The greatest weakness of the plan, Nieman said, is that it neglects to "look ahead enough."

"It does not address many of the issues coming up in the future, such as parking, remodels and intensification of uses in town," Nieman said. "It's very good at describing what problems we have today, but does not provide any guidance for five, 10 or 15 years down the road."

Dale Hekhuis, former chairman of the local chapter of the Sierra Club, said he was "reasonably impressed" with the commission's proposed draft and was satisfied that many of the issues that had been deleted were reintroduced. A new section on signs was particularly good, he said.

Hekhuis had actively participated in the commission's public meetings on the plan and had opposed the review committee's draft.

The commission's plan, however, lacks a general policy direction for the future and does not address "intensification of use," he said.

CARMEL RESIDENTS looking for a job that offers long hours, short pay and plenty of satisfaction, should note that the filing date begins this week for mayor and the two council seats up for grabs.

Mayor Clint Eastwood and councilmembers Bob Evans and Jim Wright are all up for re-election, with the jobs paying $200 and $150, respectively. The term for mayor is two years, while councilmembers serve four-year terms.

The filing period for the offices begins at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 14 and ends at 5 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 4. The only extension possible is if an incumbent fails to file — then there is a five-day grace period, except for the incumbent, who loses his chance to run if he does not meet the initial deadline.

Those interested in picking up papers may do so at no cost at Carmel City Hall, located on Monte Verde and Ocean Avenue, where Jeanne Brehmer, city clerk, has election packets available.

The Carmel general election is scheduled for Tuesday, April 12.

When picking up their nomination papers, prospective office holders will receive a voluminous notebook which answers just about any question that may arise regarding the election.

The only requirement for registering is that "You need general policy statements and the ordinances will flow from that," Hekhuis said.

He still has concerns about the deletion of specific policies on Ocean Avenue and also the candidate must have resided in Carmel 29 days prior to filing.

The candidate must also secure 20 names of sponsoring residents who are registered to vote, but Brehmer recommends soliciting 30 names in case some of those names are disqualified.

Optional is a candidate's statement which would appear on the ballot — that is limited to only 200 words.

Each candidate must also file a statement of economic interest at the time of filing the nomination papers and candidate's statement. Those forms will then be mailed to the secretary of state.

Once a campaign is under way, strict state laws govern what a candidate can and cannot do.

For example, "slate mailers," or mailings to more than 200 people in a mass mailing must be reported to the state. The same rule applies if an election committee receives more than $500 toward slate mailings in a year.

Any political advertising must show in type at least as large as the type of the advertisement the words "Paid Political Announcement."

The city also has strict regulations on the posting of any sign — especially political advertisements. The city clerk will assist you on any questions you may have.

Also, come election day, a candidate may not do any last-minute electioneering within 100 feet of the polling station, under the penalty of being charged with a misdemeanor.

Purse boosted to $770,000 for AT&T tourney

By DAVID LELAND

WITH AN increase in prize money to the tune of a $110,000 over last year's $660,000 pot, this year's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am promises to bring the finest professional golfers in the world to compete in one of the sport's most prestigious tournaments.

Tournament co-hosts Harry Crosby, Nathaniel Crosby and director Lou Russo gathered this week at the Mark Hopkins Hotel in San Francisco, with 1987 AT&T defending champion Johnny Miller and amateur golfer Clint Eastwood to preview the 1988 AT&T.

Scheduled for Feb. 4 through 7, the tourney will team some of the world's best professionals and many of the sport's most recognizable amateur golfers, when they play Pebble Beach, Cypress Point and Spyglass

Hill golf courses in an attempt to raise $1 million for charity.

Last year, 115,000 golf fans and celebrity watchers visited the tournament, which helped raise a record $930,000 for charities.

One thing became clear during this week's 30-minute press conference — the Professional Golfers' Association Tour is more synonymous with big bucks than ever before.

"It is absolutely essential to have a corporate sponsor," explained Nathaniel Crosby, adding that it is simply not practical to try and meet expenses through gate and concession receipts alone. "We'll be in the $1 million (prize money) in the next year or two."

Crosby said he and his brother were forced to answer the question, "Are we going to be a golf tournament-amateur exhibition or part of the PGA Tour?"

Crosby deflected questions pertaining to the family squabble over the use of his famous father's name for the Pebble Beach tournament, which Kathryn Crosby forbids and currently uses for her own tournament held in North Carolina.

"There's no tension, we just disagree. She's made her decision, I'm not going to harass her about it," said Nathaniel, adding that possibly there could someday be a memorial tournament in his father's name. "There's plenty of room for two Bing Crosby tournaments."

But besides the name changing two years ago, the tournament has stayed the same, according to Harry Crosby.

"The only difference is in the name itself," he said. "They've (AT&T) done everything to keep it the same in environment and to keep it competitive."

The only significant change thus far in the tournament, he said, is an expansion in the number of amateur golfers from 158 to 180.

Speaking of amateurs, there are several names being added to the roster this year that should spark attention. This year will also mark the return of Mickey Rooney, after a 20-year hiatus from the tournament.

New names in 1988 are rock singer Huey Lewis, actors Craig T. Nelson, of Poltergeist and Silkwood, and Andrew McCarthy, of Pretty in Pink.

The new cast of stars will be joined by returning celebrities such as Eastwood, Jack Lemmon, Peter Ueberroth, Dan Marino, Glen Campbell, Dwight Clark, George Brett and Telly Savalas.

Pro golfers this year will include Miller, 1986 AT&T winner Fuzzy Zoeller, Greg Norman, Tom Watson, Lanny Wadkins, Andy Bean, Tom Kite, Payne Stewart and Craig Stadler.

TO A player — pro and amateur — the AT&T courses are characterized as some of the toughest and most challenging to play anywhere.

Indeed, Miller said the shot he is most noted for came on the 16th hole at Pebble Beach, when he was leading golf legend Jack Nicklaus by one stroke and, on national TV, shanked his next shot.

It's now with a healthy respect that Miller looks at the AT&T.

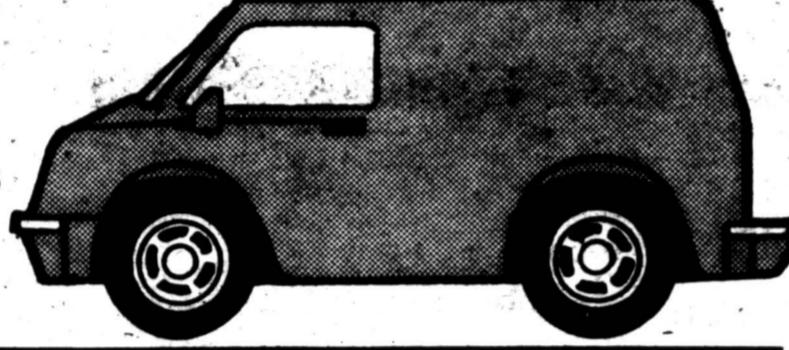

"There's no course on the tour that has the combination of golf courses that AT&T has," said Miller, who this year will be playing with son John Jr. "From talking to other pros, when you win on a great golf course like that it's a real compliment."

Johnny Miller may follow Mayor Eastwood's example

By DAVID LELAND

HE'S NOT retiring just yet, but when AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am defending champion Johnny Miller finishes his golf career, he just might try to follow in Clint Eastwood's footsteps by pursuing a life of small-town politics.

Speaking before a room full of news media at the Mark Hopkins Hotel in San Francisco during the kickoff for this year's tournament — scheduled for Feb. 4-7 — Miller danced a quick-step between golf and public life.

"He's a fan of mine, I mean I'm a fan of his," said an obviously flustered Miller, gesturing toward amateur golfer and ardent AT&T supporter Eastwood. "I'm a fan of what he's done in the city of Carmel — he's leaving an impact on where he lives."

As if to get him off the hook for his faux pas, Eastwood quickly stepped to the microphone and whispered, "He was right the first time, I am a fan of his."

Indeed, Miller has already begun his community involvement in Salt Lake City, Utah, where he currently makes his home, by sponsoring the American Indian Charity Golf Tournament, which features such celebrities as Bob Hope and former President Gerald Ford. He also hosts the Chrysler Team tournament in Florida, another charitable golf event.

Miller hinted that when he moves back to his home in Napa, he may begin his political life in earnest — he didn't rule out running for mayor.

"I've given it some thought," mused Miller.

It was clear that Miller sees himself as being in the twilight of his golf career, having slipped to No. 75 on the list of tour winnings in 1987. Miller took home a total of $139,398 last year, but $108,000 came from winning the AT&T.

"Last year might be my last victory," said the still boyish-looking Miller, 40. "I'm not one of those athletes that bows out gracefully — (but) hopefully it will be realistically."

Since joining Professional Golfers' Association Tour in 1969, when he won a little more than $8,300, Miller has gone on to establish himself as one of the top players on the PGA Tour.

Since 1969, Miller has claimed victory in 23 PGA Tour events, with his best year occurring in 1974, when he won eight tournaments and claimed $353,021 in prize money, a record amount at that time.

Miller's golf career began when he had barely reached the height of a sand wedge — he was putting, chipping and driving by the age of 5. Twelve years later, in 1964, he claimed his first title in the U.S. Juniors Tournament.

The first time Miller captured the public's eye was in 1966 when he signed up to caddy the U.S. Open at the Olympic Club in San Francisco. After signing up for caddying, Miller qualified for playing in the tournament and ended up finishing eighth in the field.

Ante increased for AT&T tourney set for Feb. 4-7

Of course a person doesn't have to be a pro golfer to suffer the stress and strain of playing a super-difficult course before a packed gallery and national news media — even superstars shudder at the thought.

"I'm going to talk about the first starting shot," said Eastwood, who even though he is no stranger to being the recipient of attention, feels the pressure of the course. "That's what these courses do to you — they're humbling."

It's not just the first drive that keeps golfers "humble" while playing the AT&T — the courses can jump up and bite a player at any time.

Last year fans roared when they spotted Jack Lemmon chipping off a small embankment at the water's edge — with the back of his pants held tightly from behind by Eastwood. Eastwood, in turn, was anchored by pros Peter Jacobsen and Greg Norman in a virtual "human chain."

Another year, Glen Campbell serenaded fans with one of his hits on the 18th green, just to show "that at least once I could do something right on the 18th green."

While Eastwood told The Pine Cone that

"many times on the golf course I've wished I was someone else," he now believes that he is playing better and feels quite confident.

Early February in Pebble Beach will tell if those are Eastwood's famous last words or merely wishful thinking.

CBS-TV will broadcast live coverage of the 1988 AT&T from 1 to 3 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 6 and 7.

CMS students take advantage of 'enriching' situation

By DAVID LELAND

FOR A half an hour each school day the students at Carmel Middle School become "enriched," much to everyone's delight.

The teachers love it, the children think it's great and the administration gets some hands-on contact with the students when they instruct classes from 10:45 to 11:15 a.m.

"It's called enrichment because it's enriching the kids' programs," says counselor Donna Alonso. "Enrichment is wonderful."

What Alonso refers to is a program that began last September in part as a chance to let the kids choose what they would like to learn...for a change.

Thus the schedule offers some 20-odd classes ranging from stonecarving and drama to computer programming and ping pong.

But just as important to the school administration, Alonso says, is the opportunity to prevent students from being pulled out of their academic classes. All band events, counseling and assemblies are scheduled for the enrichment period.

Another benefit is that the enrichment period combines students from all grades into one class.

"That eliminates picking on each other and the hazing that usually occurs in middle schools," explains Alonso, "because the kids know each other."

How it works is that the students are offered choices, of which they get to choose three. Each class lasts nine weeks so students get to take four enrichment classes during the school year.

The only exception to that took place in the beginning of the year when all of the middle school students took part in a course designed to promote good study habits.

Each teacher instructs during the enrichment period, and are allowed to teach whatever they desire. Members of the community also visit the school to help during enrichment period, such as champion dog trainer Pat Craig, who teaches a course called "All About Dogs."

Perhaps the best way to sum up how the students feel about the enrichment program would be to check into a classroom or two.

"I like carving things and making stuff," explains seventh-grader Peter Briant, as he begins to chisel a large, white rock. "I've worked with wood before (but never rock) — I made a ramp for my skateboard."

At his last enrichment session Briant took "Victorian Times."

THE NEXT enrichment course visited turns out to be a course on newspaper work, which teaches the basic skills of journalism and lets the students produce two newspapers.

"I'm interested in journalism," says eighth-grader Desiree Dennis, adding that she might someday like to work for Rolling Stone magazine. "I hope to learn how to set up a newspaper and how to write stories."

During the previous enrichment offering, Dennis took part in a leadership training program.

For pure pleasure, eighth-grader Kristin Covell has enrolled herself in a class on educational games for the computer.

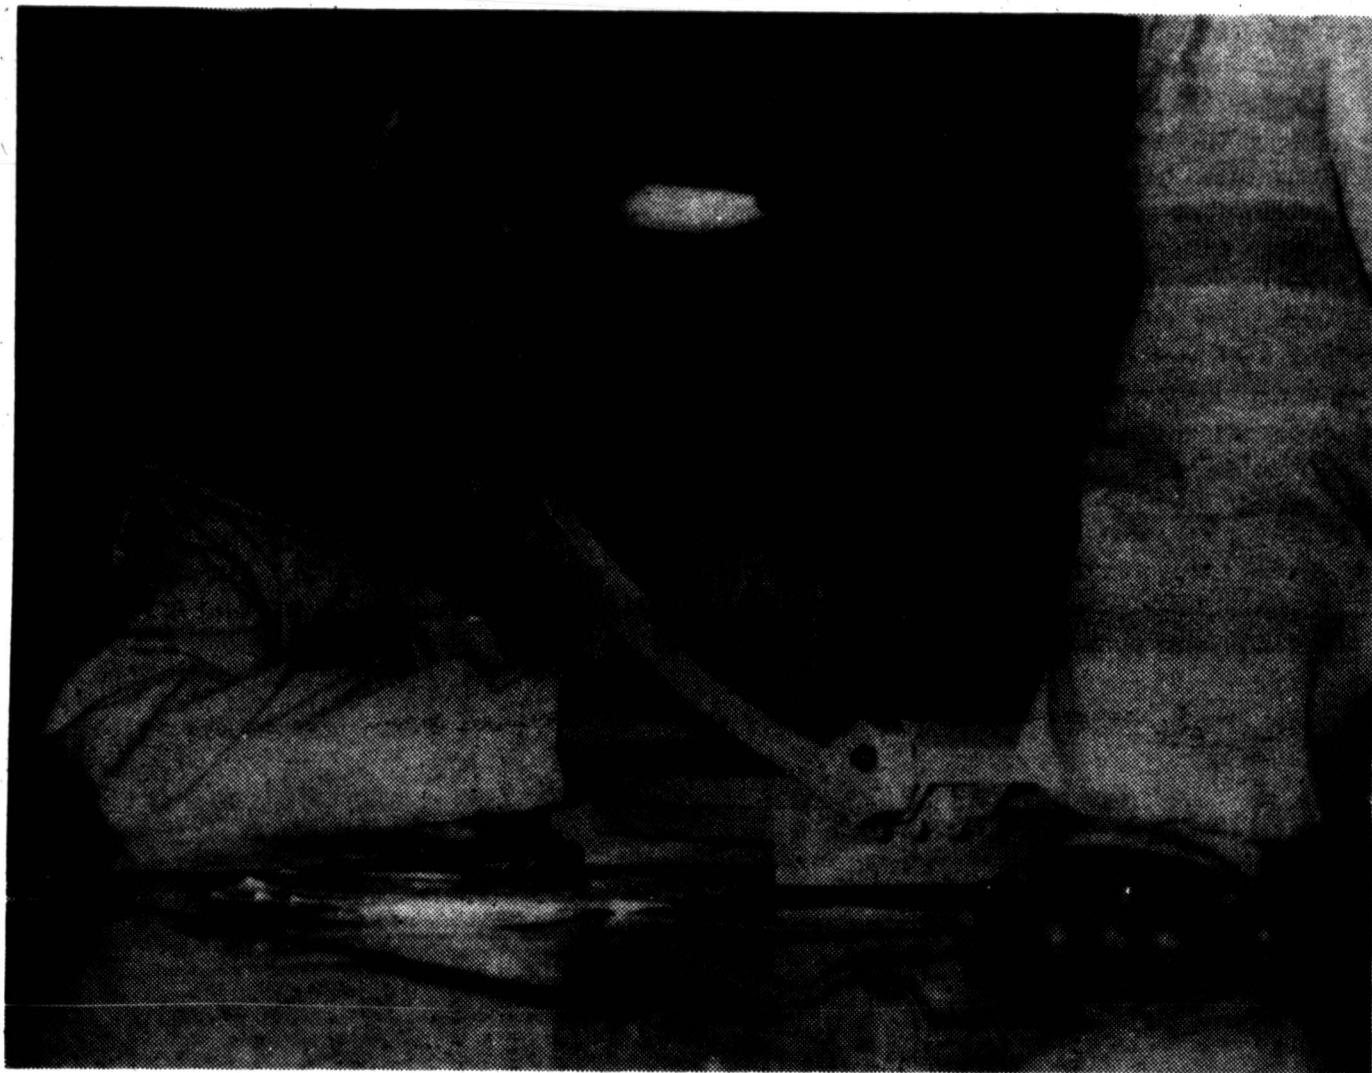

"It sounded fun," says Covell, who last exerted her efforts in an honors language arts class.

One of the most gratifying courses for the students appears to be the yearbook class, where the actual yearbook for the middle school is put together — photographed, laid out and pasted up.

"It's interesting and I like to look at pictures," says seventh-grader Hillary Ebright, as she sizes and trims photos destined for the yearbook. "I take a lot of pictures for my dad."

Last session Ebright took part in a drama class, at the end of this enrichment slot she hopes to "know more about taking pictures and how to place them."

FOR HILLARY Ebright, trimming photographs plays a major part of each enrichment period as she helps lay out the school's yearbook.

PETER BRIANT'S soft touch with his hammer is in sharp contrast to his enthusiasm for the class in stonecarving at Carmel Middle School. (Russ Bagger photos.)

Committee can now get down to 'village' issues

By RUSS BAGGERLY

BEFORE THE Carmel Valley Master Plan Advisory Committee could even begin discussing issues such as landscaping and building bulk, it first had to determine boundaries for the area it was to set standards for.

At a two-hour meeting Jan. 5, the committee was able to address commercial and residential landscaping, and discussed a number of alternative standards for building bulk limits. But that only came after several meetings in the past year in which the committee hammered out an agreement regarding where the boundaries were to be set.

The committee is reviewing applicable sections of the Carmel Valley Master Plan with an eye toward creating standards to be enforced in the Carmel Village "core area." Language in the valley master plan calls for the appointment of a committee, "whose responsibility shall be, in coordination with county staff, to refine the policies in (the master plan) regarding the Carmel Valley Village commercial core and adjacent residential areas."

At earlier meetings, residents in the village had stated objections to certain sections being included within the planning area.

One such resident, Lucy Smithson, voiced opposition to Paso Hondo, a residential area, and the Carmel Valley Little League field, being included. Resident Jeremy Edlund suggested that the airport not be included, either.

The committee worked to settle on limits considered as the village core, which will be subject to the decisions they reach. "They used maps from the county, and chose boundaries from them," said Lynne Mounday, a senior planner for Monterey County.

Currently, the committee uses Ford, Pilot and Carmel Valley roads as parts of the boundaries for the commercial core and adjacent areas they will create a plan for.

Forming what has been called a "mini-master plan," is not exactly the aim of the committee, Mounday said. Instead, they are in the process of fulfilling the part of the master plan which calls for the committee to, "address an appropriate architectural theme, design review policies, traffic circulation, parking, street lighting, signing and any other pertinent matters."

Mounday said the committee is trying to avoid the word, "theme," as it is applied to village architecture, citing the "eclectic" character of the village, and saying, "we want to encourage originality, as opposed to having a — quote-unquote — theme."

WHILE NO major decisions were reached at the Jan. 5 meeting, the committee did discuss the building bulk question at length, trying to refine wording of the two alternative proposals covering limits to "building footprint," lot coverage, and proportions of lot use between structure, parking and landscaping.

Richard Rosenthal, a local attorney, spoke from the audience, saying that the goal for the group should be, "...to encourage one-story buildings," and about parking space requirements, "...to encourage underground parking."

As an incentive, the committee discussed offering a reduction in landscaping requirements. But they acknowledged that underground parking might cause drainage problems.

The committee is made up of area residents, and all have either business, or other interests in the village core.

The members are: Peter Coakley, owner of the Carmel Valley Lodge; Bob Heald, chief of the Carmel Valley Fire Department; Randy Randazzo, owner of the Carmel Valley Market; Debbie Saxton, who works at Valley Typesetting; and Roger Williams, owner of Valley Village Self Storage.

This month, meetings are being chaired by Heald, but the duty is rotated within the committee each month.

Also discussed at the meeting were questions concerning landscaping requirements for the village core area. The committee heard from local landscape planner Wendy Kimber, of Property Services, who brought up points needing clarification of certain aspects of the master plan regarding types of plants to be used for landscaping.

The question involves whether requiring use of drought-resistant native species, as specified in the plan, is too restrictive, and should be changed to read, "drought-resistant, and/or native," species as a better choice.

Another landscaping question discussed was the use of screening plants between residential and commercial sections of the core. The committee favored such a policy.

Heald said progress has been regular in the discussion and final resolution of a proposal from the committee to be included in the valley master plan, and added that an optimistic date for completion of the proposal could be as early as this summer.

That date may also see the completion of a county-prepared revision of zoning ordinances for the valley, Mounday said. The current ordinances have been in place for decades, he said.

Most of the topics raised at the Jan. 5 meeting reflected work that the committee had done in their two previous workshop meetings. Those meetings are held at the Los Laureles Lodge and are open to the public.

Russ Lambert, the county planner normally associated with the committee, said that while the committee welcomes public input in their discussions, they do not accept such input at the workshop sessions. The committee will hold another meeting, set for noon Monday, Jan. 25.

At the Jan. 5th meeting, there was only limited public attendance. In addition to Rosenthal, Bill Parkham, a valley area businessman, and Dick Heuer, a valley area publisher and member of the water district board, were present. There were only one or two others at the meeting.

Good reviews for general plan

would like to see the section on design review tightened.

A policy in the Circulation Element, Hekhuis said, seems to suggest parking garages in the R-1 — residential district — and that is something that should be reviewed again. The policy states: "Investigate possible public parking locations in commercial areas, in the R-4 area and existing sites in the R-1 district."

The deletion of specific references to Flanders Mansion and Mission Trail Park are another weakness of the plan, he added. Those have been changed to policies for all open space in Carmel.

Planning Commissioner and former General Plan Review Committee member Olof Dahlstrand was also pleased with how the commission's plan turned out.

"I feel very comfortable about it,"

Dahlstrand said. "I am very satisfied that what we have is a very good plan."

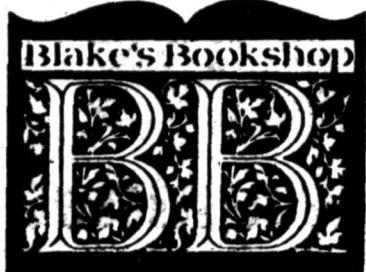

The public meetings, he said, "gave us ideas and thoughts that allowed us to make some adjustments and address some of public's concerns."

Dahlstrand had initially wanted the deletion of Ocean Avenue and residential design review policies, but was content with the plan's direction on those issues.

The "punitive" aspect of the plan has been alleviated, Dahlstrand said, but added that "It's really not the plan that's punitive, it's the ordinances."

The new plan will allow the creation of ordinances that are not so punishing, he said.

"I think (this plan) retains all the things that are general concerns of the city at the same time treats property owners fairly," Dahlstrand said. "I think it accomplishes what Clint wanted it to do."

DOLLARS & SENSE

By Anthony Piazza & Marshall Bloom

Who are these people?

WHO ARE all these people? And why are they here? The ground is still damp from the day's cold rain, and yet these folks keep arriving. Rain or no rain, these men and women would rather attend an evening seminar than stay at home and loll before the tube?

Who are these people?

Who are these people? Who could attend. There's some coffee and cookies for you in back there."

It can't be the spartan refreshments. No, they haven't come for the food.

Then what is the reason? Could it be the letter we sent out? The letter said, in part, that we would have a speaker skilled in delineating the last safe way to invest with certain tax advantages.

Maybe that's it. These good people from Carmel and the Drive, from Pacific Grove and Salinas, have come out tonight because they have an inkling about the new era. Life after the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

Yes, that's definitely it. They all have an inkling. They sense the trend. They will not be shocked awake like the overwhelming majority out there who blissfully stroll toward this year's April 15 tax deadline.

"How can this be! Where will I find the money? I thought tax reform meant lower tax brackets! Will someone please tell me what has happened?"

Oh yes, that's definitely it. Our folks here at this midwinter night's seminar understand the traumatic shift that has occurred. In a nutshell, they understand that the government is no longer in cahoots with them. Taxes must now be paid in full. Lower brackets mean nothing if the feds take away the write-offs.

"Good evening, Mrs. Sullivan, good to see you again. I hope you enjoy the speaker."

They keep pouring in, dozens of them. No Masterpiece Theatre for this crowd. No obscure nighttime sporting events on ESPN.

The speaker gathers all his materials together, a neat stack of transparencies as well as illustrative brochures. The room fills. If we leave the door open a crack, the room won't get too hot or uncomfortable.

"Hi, Janice, you've made it just in time."

One wonders how these seminar attendees differ from everyone else. But the answer is simple, an immediate recognition. These folks are actively involved in their financial well-being. Actively involved.

"Ladies and gentlemen," the speaker begins, "we're so glad so many of you came out on a chilly night like this."

After the introductory remarks—the obligatory jokes that will tie into the night's topic—he begins in earnest.

"Is there any hope after Tax Reform that you can safely tuck away a few dollars from the IRS? Is there any investment vehicle that provides a safe high return, plus liquidity, plus tax-deferral, plus certain estate-planning advantages? Has the IRS allowed anything to remain intact and viable in all these areas?"

A pause. The full house already knows the answer. That's why these people are here. They want the details.

"The answer to all these questions is yes. We're in the golden age of investing through annuities. You want to know about them, and so would everyone else if they had a more complete awareness of how Tax Reform has changed the rules."

(For additional information about annuities, Messrs. Piazza and Bloom, associate vice presidents at Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., can be contacted at 373-1861 or P.O. Box 631, Monterey 93942.)

Road work progressing on Laureles Grade Road

AN $80,000 county road project to replace, upgrade and install new guardrails on Laureles Grade Road is expected to be completed ahead of schedule.

The project, which began Jan. 5, is expected to improve safety on some of the steep and winding road's many curves. The highly travelled road links Carmel Valley and Highway 68.

County officials have projected a work completion date of Feb. 19, weather permitting, but according to Hank Hein, county engineer, "the contractor is quite a bit ahead of schedule. They should be finished very soon."

The contractor on the project, Apex Fence Co., will eventually install and replace nine sets of guardrails and will build up roadway shoulders in three locations.

While crews are at work, traffic control will be in effect, with flagmen and traffic cones restricting the flow of cars passing over the grade to one-way in places. The crew intends to operate mostly during normal working hours, generally between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

County officials urge motorists on the grade to continue to exercise caution, and to watch for workers and equipment in the area.

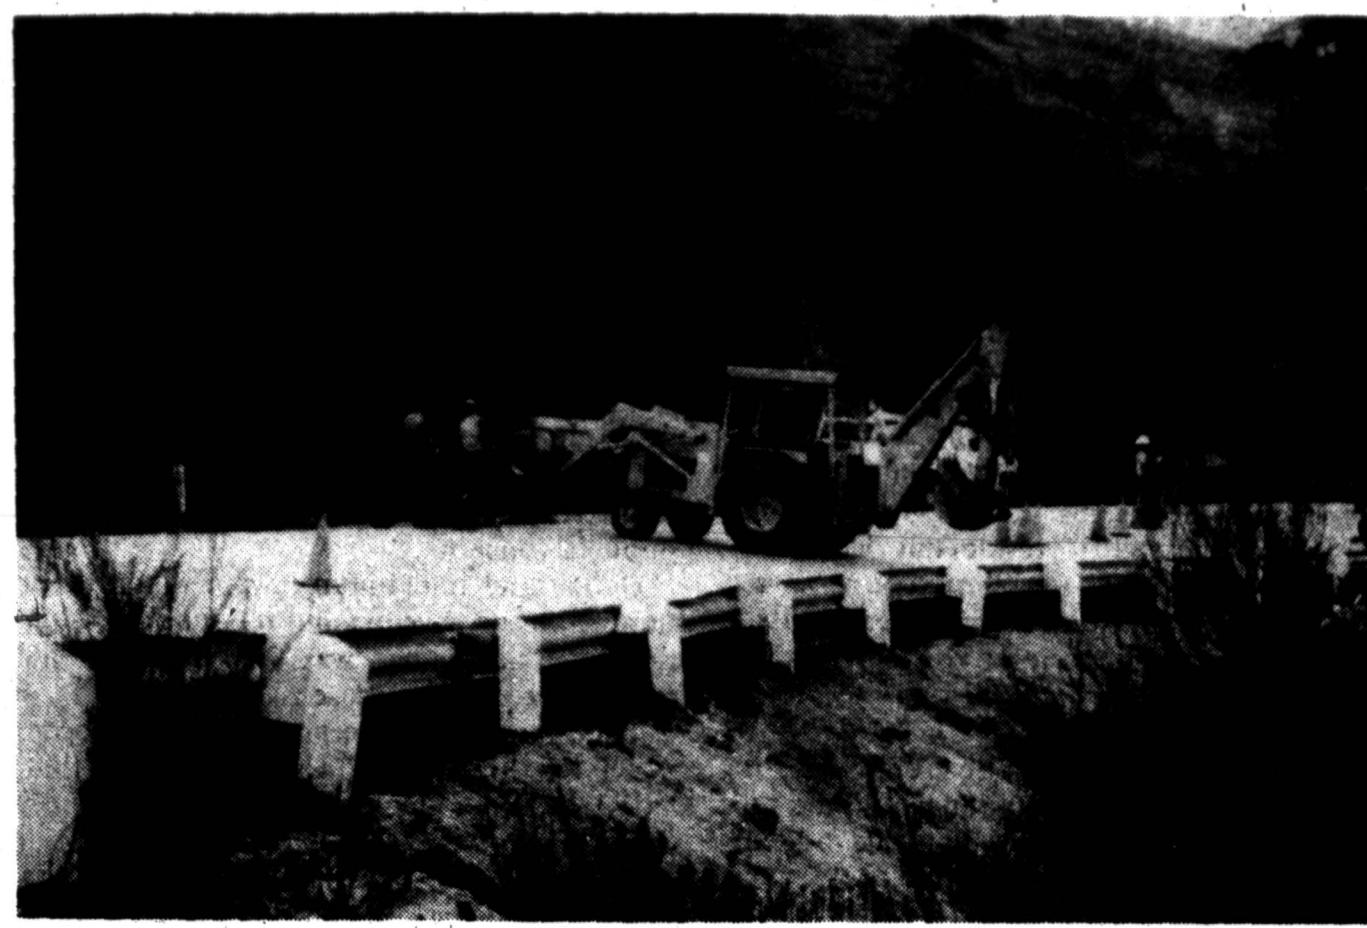

Although the county is heading the project, no county funds are being used.

"Funding for the project is all federal traffic safety money," said Hein. "It was channeled through Caltrans to the county for this project. The need for additional barriers was identified by the traffic department."

Hein said so far the crew has installed more than 1,700 feet of railing. He admitted, however, that there has been an equipment breakdown involving an "auger-piling rig" which will cause a minor delay in the project.

He also said there is another project scheduled for the area which should begin in late April or early May.

"The county is very pleased with how this project has been progressing," Hein said.

City to issue parking permits

THE CITY of Carmel-by-the-Sea will be issuing Resident Parking Permits to Carmel residents and residential property owners.

The permits will be good for one year, starting in February of 1988 and ending in February 1989. The permits authorize the holders extended parking ONLY in the following time zones:

1. Two hours in parking spaces designated for one hour.

2. Forty minutes in parking spaces designated for twenty minutes.

3. Parking on Scenic Drive after Sunset.

In order to have a permit you must meet the following requirements:

1. Be the registered owner of the vehicle.
2. Bring your vehicle to the designated location to have the sticker attached.
3. Be a resident or own residential property with the city limits of Carmel-by-the-Sea.
4. Bring some type of proof indicating you are a resident or own residential property within the city limits.

5. Bring $2 to purchase the permit.

The permit will be issued at the center parking lot of Sunset Center on:

1. Saturday, Jan. 23 from 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.
2. Wednesday, Jan. 27 from 12 p.m. - 3 p.m.
3. Saturday, Jan. 30 from 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.

Permits will be available at the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department after Feb. 2, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

PHONE EXTENSIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS

Confirming an article in the Pine Cone about two months ago, concerning improved local telephone service, large spools of cable are now lying along the Carmel Monterey hill road awaiting stringing on old and new poles.

Manager F.A. Edwards of the telephone company has announced that something like $30,000 will be expended in improving and extending the service in Carmel, Pebble Beach and Carmel Highlands.

A petition was circulated in Carmel last week asking for the establishment of an independent local exchange, but it is not likely that this will come about at present, principally for the reason that most phone patrons do not desire the other cities on the peninsula to be "long distance," with the expense that entails.

AROUND THE TOWN

Tuesday, voters in the down-coast Palo Colorado School District voted 35 to 5 to join the Carmel Unified School District.

Together with the Captain Cooper district further south, which had voted on 8 January 76 to 4 to join Carmel, the two districts will add approximately 80 elementary and 20 high school and junior high school students to the unified district.

As a result of the annexation, voters of the down-coast areas will be able to vote for trustees in the 16 April elections, and to file for candidacy if they choose.

Under the new ordinance, bingo play will open to fraternal groups, civic leagues and recreation clubs who intend to share their earnings charitably.

WHAT EVER HAPPENED TO THE TULARICITOS AQUIFER?

Hope of finding water in the so-called Tularicitos aquifer beneath Carmel Valley Ranch apparently has been abandoned by developers.

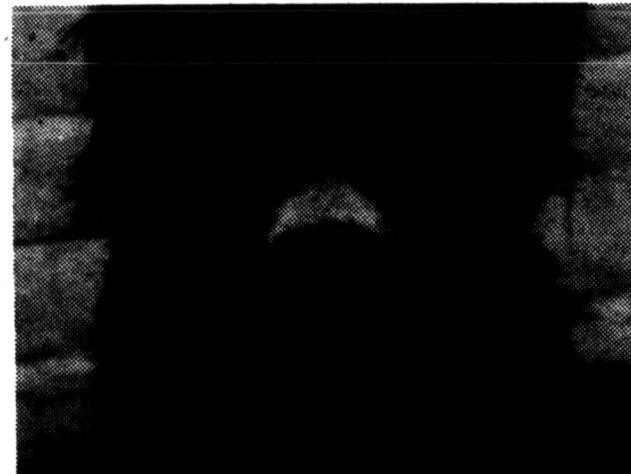

But since approval of the Carmel Valley Ranch development by Monterey County in 1976 was contingent upon the existence of sufficient water to supply the project from the Tularicitos aquifer, some Carmel Valley residents don't believe portions of the ranch should be annexed to the California-American Water Co.

As a result, a committee for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District will evaluate the district annexation policy which would allow Carmel Valley Ranch to annex 30 acres to the Cal-Am service area for its planned 100-unit resort lodge.

Dogs and cats like those pictured on this page need and deserve good homes. Ten thousand years ago people began to domesticate dogs and cats because they were useful companions, and when we made them dependent upon us, we became responsible for their well-being. Sad to say, too many people have failed in their responsibility to protect the welfare of those creatures who depend upon us. This irresponsibility has created a tragic overpopulation of domestic animals which means that millions of dogs and cats are euthanized in this country every year. Puppy mills continue to churn out puppies in unwholesome conditions simply because there is money in such an unsavory enterprise. Amateurs breed their pets and produce more puppies and kittens while millions are dying because there are far more domestic animals than good homes for them. Owning a pet means owning up to a lot of responsibility. Don't litter: have your pet spayed or neutered.

WE SHARE, YOU CAN TOO.

FOCUS (Friends Of Carmel Unified Schools) is a charitable, non-profit corporation whose purpose is to raise funds and to spend those funds for the benefit of the students of the Carmel Unified School District. FOCUS is an all-volunteer group of parents, teachers, and interested citizens.

Funds raised by FOCUS are applied directly to the classroom. Over the years expenditures by FOCUS have included everything from the purchase of computers and computer programs for all schools, to the acquisition of field guides for high school biology classes, to the purchase of tricycles for use by kindergarteners.

Sometime after the first week of November, most residents of the school district will be receiving a one-time State of California rebate. The minimum rebate will be $32.00; some persons will receive over $200.00.

FOCUS is asking you to SHARE this windfall with the students of the Carmel Unified School District. Each week we will publish the names of those persons who have chosen to SHARE. Please take a few moments to complete the attached pledge and return it to us. When your pledge is received, your name will be added to our honor roll.

When you SHARE your rebate with us, you can rest assured that all funds raised by FOCUS will be spent by FOCUS for the education of our children. Contributions to FOCUS are tax deductible for taxpayers who itemize.

Sincerely yours,
Sidney M. Morris

Gone With The Wind at Stonepine

HOW DOES this sound for a weekend of fun? A mariachi band greeting guests as they arrive at Stonepine from the Monterey Airport, a Mexican lunch, carriage rides, tennis, massage, an informal dinner, Saturday morning after brunch: "Tennis anyone?", horse exhibition, Western barbecue, horseback riding and into costumes to relive the Civil War era of Gone With The Wind with a battle between the North and the South. Then, a formal dinner, entertainment and dancing?

These were part of the plans for a surprise 47th birthday party for Peter Mullin of Los Angeles given by his wife Pam. She said she had wanted to visit Stonepine since reading about it in Architectural Digest. The surprise element was managed by booking into Carmel's Pine Inn on Thursday before the plane disgorged hometown friends mid-morning on Friday.

Once the close friends appeared, the surprise was sprung and all spent a fun-packed weekend at Stonepine arranged by Carmel Valley's super party-planner Char Etienne.

Going from paddocks-to-the-palatial, the GWTW Battle and Ball was the climax on Saturday evening. Costumed Scarlett O'Hara and handsome Rhett Butlers and gentlemanly officers sipped Mint Julips while bayonets were brandished, muskets were loaded and fired, and smoke filled the gentle evening air on the hill behind the veranda.

Soldiers and cavalrymen of the Confederate and Union armies were locked in battle behind Tara Plantation (known at other times known as Chateau Noel, the palatial main house of Stonepine). Pat Duval sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" with banjo accompaniment by "Fast Eddie."

Everyone applauded and actor David Hedison asked the Tennessee Brigade if they had a part for him. (He's between pictures, you see).

The 22 guests sat down for a formal dinner of Oysters Rockefeller, pickled okra, country fried chicken, honey-glazed southern ham, black-eyed peas, collard greens (this was Tara Plantation in the deep South, you remember), mashed potatoes with gravy, buttermilk biscuits, pecan pie with ice cream, peach cobbler, New Orleans coffee with bourbon and cream float. On the menu cover was a color photo of Vivian Leigh and the original Rhett Butler, Clark Gable.

Lest you think the party's over, 'tis not so. The proper way to proceed with the Virginia Reel was given by an instructor, more entertainment and dancing. Those souls with enough energy played tennis on Sunday morn after brunch and later departed for the airport and points south.

When Mrs. Peter Mullin asked, "How can you top this next year?" her husband quickly responded, "Knowing her, she can do it." The Mullins are known here through their participation in the Concours d'Elegance. They won second place last August and will no doubt be back this year for a try at first.

The Mullins' close friends attending were Mr. and Mrs. David Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Dudman, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Evans, Mr. and Mrs. James McCallum, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Budge Offer, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ferry and Mr. and Mrs. David Hedison. The John Forsythes were unable to attend due to a film commitment.

Mr. Hedison, who had never been in this area before, said, "I may never leave."

KITTY RAGSDALE Luncheon. Nobody, but nobody, gives a more elegant luncheon for friends than Kitty Ragsdale. Never mind that it is held in a hotel private dining room.

One guest walked into the Captain's Table Room at the Monterey Beach Hotel and said, "My, doesn't this hotel set a beautiful table." She soon learned that Kitty did all the decorating, four stunning white rose and spider mum centerpieces, framed photos for placecards, an orchid in each napkin at the settings of her own porcelain dishes and tableware placed on her reticulated linen tablecloths.

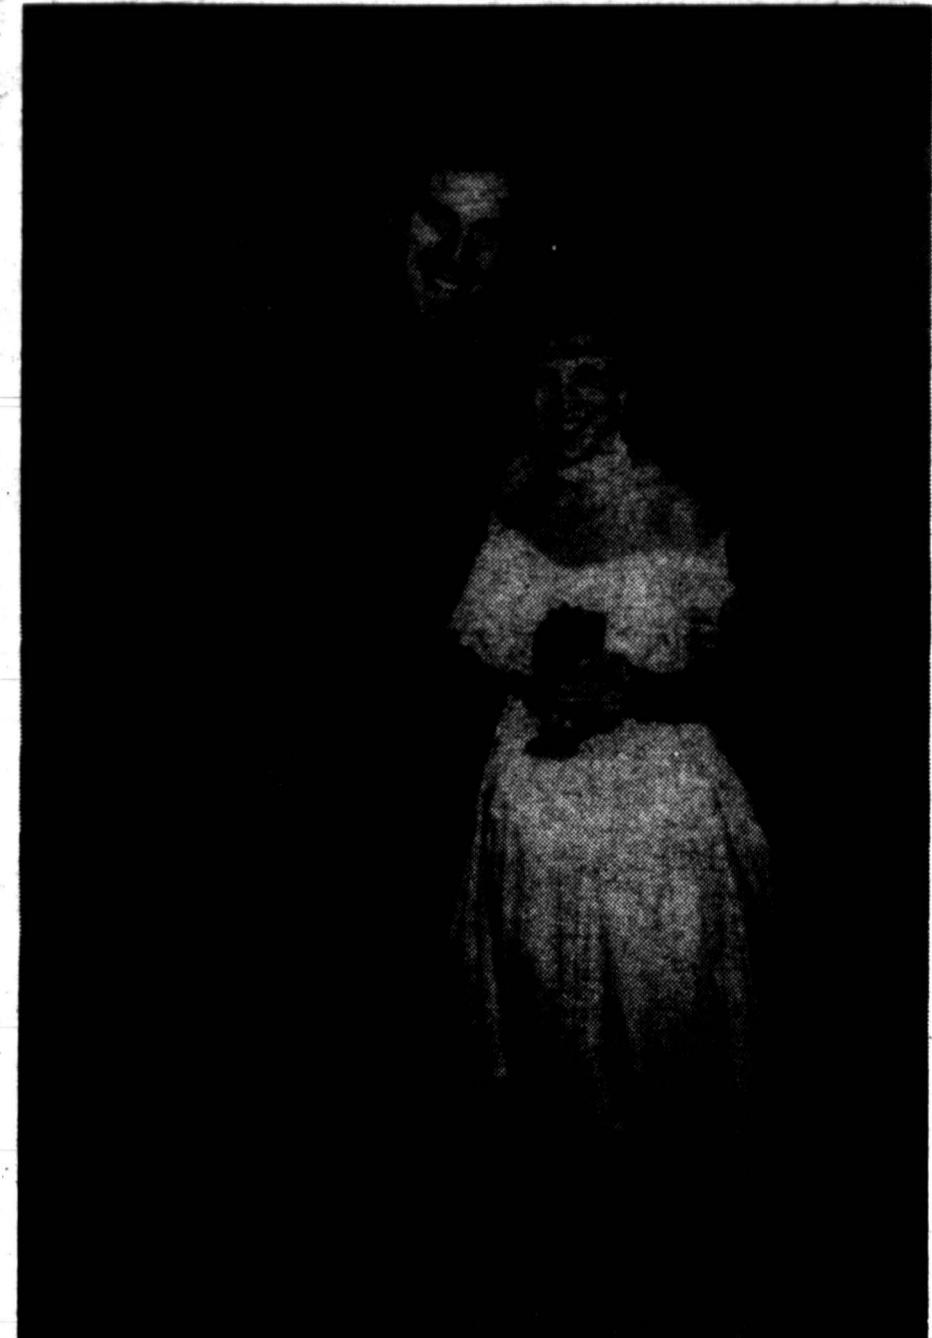

Several individual guest gifts were beautifully and lovingly wrapped and parchment menus of the banquet-style luncheon were placed nearby. It began with champagne and progressed upward to stuffed crab on heart of artichoke, poached filet of sole vin blanc, Waldorf Mandarin orange, quail under glass. Executive chef Gerhardt Liesche, came in to flame the Cherries Jubilee. Then came trays of homemade cookies and a variety of chocolates. All delicious!

One whale was coaxed into making a special appearance. He (or she) came in as far as the second wave from the beach and spouted away to the delight of the guests. Mary Lee Sunseri (with guitar and recorder) sang songs from her two new tapes: Whale Watching and Good Night, Sleep Tight.

We all agreed that it is a special treat to be a friend of a gracious and special lady — Kitty Ragsdale.

THE WEEKEND Gone With the Wind birthday party at Stonepine was given for this Southern gentleman, Peter Mullin, by his wife, Pam. (Chuck Scardina photos.)

NO, THAT'S not Scarlett and Rhett (sans mustache), but Char Etienne and dashing David Hedison, Hollywood actor.

LINDA AND Jim McCallum pose in the library at "Tara Plantation" (Chateau Noel) at Stonepine.

IN TRUE Confederate Army fashion, the guest of honor, Peter Mullin, holds the flag of the rebellious South as he joined the Tennessee Brigade on the lawn of Stonepine with his wife Pam, who threw him the lavish birthday bash last weekend.

GOLDEN YEAR for March of Dimes. Celebrity chefs will be the frosting on the cake. The basic cake itself comes down to the fact that we have so many talented and generous interior designers who are willing to dream up the "dream kitchens" in which celebrity cooks can shine forth as they prepare favorite recipes for the March of Dimes Gourmet Gala Jan. 16.

The dozen or so brilliant kitchen ambiances will be created by Jan Gardner, Joy Geller, Gruwell-Pheasant, Joy Holland, L.S. Lamb Group, Landell Galleries, Nancy McIninch, T. Scott Moore, Jerry Welling and R.I. Reate (his daughter had the title role in the movie The Golden Child).

All that slicing and chopping is a "cooking concours" with winners receiving awards. Educated palates will "taste-and-tell" us all who won. The distinguished palates belong to: James Berrien (Food and Wine magazine), Laura Chenel (cheesemaker), our own Bert Cutino (Sardine Factory owner and veep of American Culinary Federation), Daniel Durant (culinary director, Royal Viking Line), Jerry Di Vecchio (Sunset mag), Maida Heatter (cookbook author), and Peter Komposch (veep and general manager, Highlands Inn).

Sparkling away in kitchens to be set up in the mezzanine and ballroom of the Monterey Sheraton Hotel will be Ernest and Tova Borgnine (she also whips up creams that make everyone looks years younger, and Mr. B's first big break in the movies was in Marty which is on the April agenda at Sunset Center), Lorenzo Lamas (handsome son of the late Fernando), Doug McClure, Hugh O'Brien, actresses Elinor Donahue and Zelda Rubenstein, comedy and song whiz JoAnne Worley and her actor hubby Roger Perry (who are almost part-time residents now), actor Tab Hunter, Michael (As The World Turns) Swan had to cancel his culinary contribution.

All will be "starring-away" for the 450 guests along with our own local luminaries such as Alan Shugart (Seagate), Mikel Pippi (Monterey Film Festival and Frohman Academy), James McGillen (a Pebble resident and prez of Lorimar Productions), charming pediatrician Dr. Shreve Archer, Cary Gott (winemaster of chief sponsor, Monterey Vineyard), and others.

Chef Heinz Guggenberg will duplicate dishes for the 12-course dinner (at $150 per ticket), with the March of Dimes hoping to raise $65,000 to go toward birth defects prevention in this first event of its 50th anniversary year.

Among duties of the 150 volunteers, who work all year on this culinary arts evening, they found the following kitchen sponsors: Elan, Homes and Land magazine, It's Bud's Pub, Mills Distributing Co., Monterey Rolls Royce, The Nunes Co., Prudential-Bache, Saks, R.K. Shugart, Stahl Motor Co., and First American Title. And, once again, the generous Monterey Sheraton will allow the use of space and time for constructing those glamorous kitchens for the glamorous chefs. On Friday afternoon (3 to 4 p.m.), Maida Heatter (Gabriel's daughter), will sign her sinful dessert books at a reception in her honor in Ferrante's Restaurant.

There may be a few of these hot tickets left, but if not, you can check your friends to see if they have an extra one.

STEPHANIE IN pigtails served Mint Juleps to Maud Ferry and Richard Beulow for Civil War-era birthday party at Stonepine.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID HEDISON sipped Mint Juleps at Tara Plantation for a Gone With the Wind birthday party.

BETTY AND Babette, stylists, were brought into Stonepine for Scarlett O'Hara hairdos for the Gone With the Wind birthday party. Under comb and curling iron were Carol Dudman and Bridgett Hedison.

THE BATTLE at Tara Plantation raged on between the forces of the North and South armies.

PARTY GUESTS, who came in from the South (Southern California that is), assemble with both North and South soldiers on the "battlefield" at Stonepine. Kneeling in front were Pat Duval and banjoist Fast Eddy.

HOW TO LIVE WITH A GOLFAHOLIC

By Carmel Author Mark Oman

WARNING!

The following excerpt from the new book HOW TO LIVE WITH A GOLFAHOLIC is intended solely for the private use of those who suspect they may be friends of, related to, or — heaven forbid — married to a golfaaholic. In the weeks ahead you'll learn the whole sordid story; how to survive the "traps and hazards" of life with a golf lover.

Cashing in on your golfaaholic

EVERY WINTER thousands of golfaaholics suffer the pain and anguish of going "Cold Bogey."

This period is even harder on you. In order to survive the long winter, you have to learn how to play with your golf lover. Indulge his fantasies. Why?

Because your golfaaholic needs all the TLC he can get in this most critical time of need.

Because to a real golf addict a week without a waggle is like a day without sunshine.

But primarily because tender loving care and understanding carefully invested in your golfaaholic during the winter can be commodities of great value on the Guilt Exchange the rest of the year!

Keeping your golfaaholic happy during the long winter months can be one of the best investments you'll ever make.

If handled properly, your golfaaholic will be so overcome by your thoughtfulness that he won't think twice when you suggest the following rate of exchange.

GOLFAHOLIC GETS

An afternoon of video cassettes of the U.S. Open, the British Open, and the Masters with three golf junkie friends. Cold cuts and beer available. Self-serve.

EXCHANGE RATE:

You get an afternoon at Bloomingdale's, Saks Fifth Avenue, and Nieman Marcus with three girlfriends who know how to make it and spend it.

A leisurely lunch at the "in" new bistro where the way the handsome young waiter looks at you makes you feel like a wanted woman. You order wine, watercress, and the waiter for dessert.

GOLFAHOLIC GETS:

One Saturday round, 18 holes—winter rules—across the living room, around the den, through your bedroom and into the kitchen with his regular foursome.

You caddie, keep all scores, provide tee prizes, awards, and serve lunch with hot entree, cold potatoes, jello salad, and choice of beverage.

EXCHANGE RATE:

You get a week at the Golden Door. You get pampered and catered to, enjoy massages, herbal wraps, and mudbaths.

You return home rejuvenated, reborn, and ready to face your golfaaholic and not flinch at his blinding polyester plaid pants.

GOLFAHOLIC GETS:

A fantasy night with Jan Stephenson. You promise not to laugh at his foreplay.

EXCHANGE RATE:

You get a real night at Chippendales. One of the liberated ladies with you knows one of the hard bodies and sets you up after the show.

The young hunk thinks you're a real hunkette. He takes you to his pad. You are afraid, but you have to ask. Does he like to...that 4-letter word? "Golf?...What's that?" he answers innocently.

This guy really knows how to score.

Obviously the above are only suggested rates of exchange.

Of course when golf season blossoms once again in the spring, you instigate a much simpler game plan...

Whatever he spends on green fees, lessons, golf hardware, software, and underwear, you spend an equal amount on shopping, the stock market, precious metals, diamonds, limos and lobster!

It'll be tough keeping up with him, but do the best you can.

Creeping doom

IF YOU are one of the angry many who will not be lulled into a fatal sleep while a deadly brew is worming its way into the very vitals of Carmel-by-the-Sea which discerning people the world over have so long treasured, you must hurry to city hall to pick up your copy of the latest general plan revision which outlines the creeping doom I've just described.

The public hearing on this general plan revision is set for 3 o'clock next Wednesday, Jan. 20, at Carpenter Hall in the Sunset Center, and it is likely that the city council will act on the lethal document a week later.

Once more it's Denise Duffy Associates, employed by the city council, which is twisting and turning the tortured logic in this menacing general plan revision. While it's pulling all the teeth out of past planning and zoning controls and at the same time giving them empty lip service, it argues for its own relaxed, sleep-inducing pseudo-wisdom. Here's how Duffy & Associates put it:

"The revised plan slightly modifies existing policies regarding the type of uses allowed. The revised plan eliminates a policy from the 1984 General Plan which seeks to reduce the numbers of certain retail uses, including but not limited to, restaurants, bars, art galleries, real estate offices and jewelry stores in the C-1-C district. Rather than identify certain uses which should be limited, the revised plan adds an objective and policies that call for maintenance of a mix of commercial uses that are compatible with the character of Carmel as a residential village. The revised plan calls for control and possible reduction of the number of businesses that are found to be out of proportion with a balanced mix of uses necessary to protect the City's residential character..."

The italicized in this quotation are, of course, mine.

When you try to get a handle on what the Duffy report actually means when it talks about that mix of commercial uses, you get into a never-never land of deceiving double-think and gobbledegook. Here's an example from the Duffy report:

"The Revised Plan seeks to maintain a balance of commercial uses and encourage residentially oriented businesses without identifying uses which should be reduced in number..."

Here's another Duffy example of its calm matter-of-fact view of the effect of future events:

"Increased commercial development is likely to increase user and employee traffic, especially on some congested downtown streets. Retention of policies to encourage mixed commercial and residential uses will help minimize traffic increases resulting from future buildout."

In dealing with the way in which congestion on a busy business block can be relieved, the city council at its recent meeting decided surprisingly to increase curb-side truck parking to all of the east side of San Carlos from Ocean Avenue to Seventh Street. Since double-parking of trucks can't be stopped, this action would lead to more rather than less curb-side truck parking, along with the usual double-parked trucks parking from San Carlos to Seventh.

WHAT WE have gleaned from the general plan revision is the latest effort to downgrade the intent of the magnificent Carmel-by-the-Sea credo which spelled out in 1929 exactly what the city was and what it intended to be. Here's that famous credo:

"Carmel is essentially, predominantly, and primarily a residential city in which business and commerce have been, are now, and are proposed to be in the future subordinated to its residential character..."

This same credo is still in effect, and it still stands at the head of all the city's planning-and-zoning law, and it also holds its honored place in city hall.

And there is ample state law to support the kind of city authority which needs to be exercised if now threatened Carmel is to live again.

Section 65850 of the State Government Code gives cities specific authority to "regulate the use of buildings, structures, and land" as spelled out in a broad range of sub-paragraphs which, by the way, include one which says: Establish requirements for street parking and loading. And this should certainly not mean to accommodate more and more of those so-called "mixed commercial" uses, in a city whose 1929 credo says its intent is to subordinate business and commerce "to its residential character."

There are other dubious city activities in the offing which represent in one way or another the accommodation of commercial interests. One is a plan to tie the city and the Pine Inn together in providing more Pine Inn parking on city-owned residentially zoned lots. Another commercially tainted project is the proposed multi-story parking garage at the north end of the Sunset Center property.

PERHAPS THE greatest peril which faces residentially oriented Carmel at this time, is the prospect of 21 large development projects which could get underway whenever sufficient water might be allocated to Carmel by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

There are three residentially oriented organizations which are earnestly trying to save the Carmel they love—the Carmel Residents Association, the Carmel-by-the-Sea Neighbors Association, and the Concerned Carmel Citizens—and I hope that you will help them if you are not already involved.

Seventeen years ago—in the March 4, 1971 issue of the Pine Cone—I proposed that Carmel and its environs should seek to become a Heritage City. I said then that "Today there is a desperate and urgent need for a few human sanctuaries. The first should be right here in Carmel. No place on today's earth so deserves such a status."

How long this envied status could still come to Carmel, can be decided by the effort which today's Carmelites make in this crisis time.

HOSPICE GRIEFBUSTERS WIN NATIONAL AWARD

Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula was honored by the National Hospice Organization with the 1987 President's Award of Excellence for its Griefbusters program. Present to accept the award were originators Brenda Aronowitz, Kay Dyer, Sandy Larson, Barbara Morais, Audrey Starr and Weenie Wilder.

The award was presented for outstanding achievement in the design of an education program for innovative use of print media. This was the highest award given at the national conference which was held in Los Angeles in November. The judging was done by an independent panel comprised of educators, hospice volunteers, media experts and journalists.

Griefbusters is the program designed specifically to aid school-age children to learn to deal with loss, either through death, divorce, separation or other reasons. Trained volunteers provide discussions, presentations and workshops to help young people understand and work through the grieving process.

An ongoing goal of the Griefbusters program is to provide, free of charge, an in-service for the entire staff of each of the 42 schools on the Monterey Peninsula, using the award-winning manual as a basis for showing teachers how to help grieving students in the classroom. Additionally, in August 1987, Griefbusters offered a seminar on how to set a similar program in other communities; 22 people from all over California attended that conference.

In 1985, Griefbusters won the National Hospice Organization Award of Excellence for Community Awareness.

For more information, call the Hospice Resource Center at 649-1772.

COMMODORE SLOAT CHAPTER DAR CHRISTMAS LUNCH

Members of the Commodore Sloat Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution recently held their annual Christmas luncheon, chaired by J. Gerald Chaney who made the arrangements with the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

Mrs. F.F. Coates, regent, presented members of the Children of the American Revolution, Sgt. John Emmons Society who sang several familiar Christmas carols. Stephanie Martin, president, introduced Anne Gerken who played a Christmas song on the violin.

Following this Mrs. Harry F. H. Jones, California State Society DAR organizing secretary and Commodore Sloat second vice regent presented guest speaker Mrs. Floyd Hicks, state chairman for Americanism. Hicks gave an interesting bird's eye view of different historical and human interest things that had happened over the last 200 years on each day of the month of December in America.

After brief business announcements Coates wished everyone a Merry Christmas.

New director

CARMEL HOTELIER Casaba L. Ajani has been elected for a three-year term to the California Hotel & Motel Association Board of Directors. A 14-year resident of the Monterey Peninsula, Ajani is vice president and managing director of the Mobil 5-star rated Quail Lodge Resort. He is a past president of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and the Visitors and Convention Bureau, and the Monterey Peninsula Hotel and Restaurant Association. He also served on the board of directors of the Tennessee Hotel Association and was president of the Metropolitan Memphis Hotel Association. In 1985 Ajani received "The Outstanding Hospitality Professional of the Year Award" from the Monterey Peninsula Hotel Association. The 1,600 Member California Hotel and Restaurant Association is the largest state trade association in the country representing the lodging industry. The California Hotel & Motel Association is the leading trade association for the state's tourism industry.

Of interest to the public at large is the annual Genealogical Seminar sponsored by the Commodore Sloat Chapter Saturday, Feb. 6 at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Seaside. For more information on this activity call Mrs. R.G. Lehman 375-1347.

Also, any young people desiring more information on membership in the Children of the American Revolution may contact Stephanie Martin at 649-8341. Next meeting is scheduled for Jan. 13, at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. New interested people welcome.

WOMEN'S ISSUE TO BE DISCUSSED JAN. 18

Women's issues, a study-action group in the American Association of University Women will meet again at the home of Helen McCaig, Pebble Beach, Monday, Jan. 18 at 7 p.m. Comprising representatives from 16 women's organizations, this group focuses on women in poverty, and the need to combat the forces keeping women powerless and economically deprived.

Persons interested may telephone Mrs. McCaig, leader of the group, and an active member of Church Women United.

LEAGUE TO HOST "GAIN" DISCUSSION

Representatives of Monterey County's Social Services Department will appear at the Thursday, Jan. 14 meeting of the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula to discuss the new welfare program, GAIN.

The discussion comes as the local league attempts to reach consensus on the question of meeting human needs, the topic of a national study by the organization.

Crop worth harvesting?

Carmel loves trees and during the recent storms we paid a price for that love, but I have not heard anyone say, "ban the trees." We have an interest in our family tree. My name, Lawrence, means crowned with laurel, the leaves of the tree held sacred by both Greeks and Romans and from which they crowned their heroes, poets and victors.

In ancient Israel, both the vine and the fig were used as symbols of God's People, of fruitfulness and service. In the heat of the day they gave shade and supplied men with food and drink.

Trees remind men of the love and care of a father. As Rotarians, are we trees and vines that bear fruit? Are we pruning away the dead branches? Do we show new growth and bounty?

Rotarians are meant to be fruitful and to feed a hungry world in a material and spiritual sense; to give generous service about self and to bring the good tidings that we serve God by serving our neighbor. Do we have to ask Joe Carcione if our crop will be worth harvesting? Amen.

CSAA Provides Ski Reports

Details on ski conditions and weather information for the Sierra Nevada are available to winter sports fans who call the California State Automobile Association's ski phone (415) 864-6440.

During the CSAA ski phone's 31st year, the AAA-affiliated auto club is providing a daily recorded telephone summary of skiing and weather conditions throughout the ski season. The report service is available 24 hours a day, with an update each weekday morning by 10 a.m.

Reports indicate how much snow has fallen, total amount of snow on the ground, conditions of the skiing surface, the number of downhill lifts operating and the number of kilometers of cross-country set track open at ski resorts.

Ski areas include most major resorts within convenient driving range for ski fans in northern and central California and Nevada. The areas range from Lassen in the north to Mammoth in the southern Sierra, with particular emphasis on the resorts in and near the Tahoe basin.

Prairie Winds' opens at Cherry Hall

Play gives voice to pioneer women

By ANNE PAPINEAU

LIKE PIONEERS of ages past, Delia Dreis dared to travel from the known to the unknown.

Dreis pulled up stakes in 1971, leaving behind her Pacific Grove hardware store, her Monterey Peninsula friends and grandchildren to seek a new life in British Columbia, Canada.

For the past six years home has been a modestly scaled motorhome, shared with her dog and cat. Dreis christened her motorhome "Periwinkle," in honor of the shell favored by the hermit crab.

The wheels of Periwinkle have taken Dreis on a self-directed journey of discovery. With infectious zeal, she has sought out the stories of other pioneers, specifically those of the women who settled the Canadian prairie.

Dreis has synthesized her discoveries into a one-woman show called Prairie Winds — Prairie Women. She will present it at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Jan. 14-16, at Carmel's Cherry Hall.

"I fell in love with the Canadian prairie, its form, shape and color," notes Dreis. "It provides a simple backdrop against which the human experience is clearly silhouetted. If you try to tell of the human experience against the backdrop of downtown New York City or even Carmel, it's too busy."

With the diligence of a bloodhound, Dreis sifted through historical artifacts and diaries to learn of Canadian pioneer life.

"Basically it is a very, very sad story, that of the pioneers," explains Dreis. "The women were victims of a political system that wanted to settle the prairies before the United States did. The Canadian Pacific Railroad had no idea what there were asking the settlers to do. It was very, very difficult to survive. If we had any clue how many people came to the prairie and died, we would probably be aghast."

In her one-woman performance, Dreis attempts to convey not only the sadness but also the drama of the era. Historically, Prairie Winds focuses on a 100-year period beginning in 1810 with the life of an aging Cree Indian called Turtle Woman to her great granddaughter speaking to a government agent in 1913. In between, Dreis portrays a Scottish settler, a black farmer, a maid to an English lord, a Mennonite refugee and others.

THERE WERE three phases to the research for Prairie Winds.

"I read everything I could on Canadian prairie history," the playwright/actress states. "Then I did archival work in Edmonton, Saskatoon and Winnipeg. I had a portable typewriter and I'd go through the card catalogues and end up with a desk covered with oral history tapes, original diaries of prairie women and original bills of sale."

"I wanted to know what people ate and how much it cost. I read the letters women wrote. These were mostly by upper class women because unfortunately many women were illiterate. I actually held history in my hand."

Dreis also met with pioneer survivors, people who were children at the turn-of-the-century during the twilight years of the settlement era...

"There are still people with very clear memories of their childhood and stories their mothers and fathers told them."

Her research took three years.

"One summer I spent on the Flying Dust Cree Reserve in Northern Saskatchewan," Dreis adds. "The hardest character for me to get a hold of was the Indian woman. The most difficult for me to internalize were the black and Cree women. Then the women came intuitively, in the middle of the night in my head ... sometimes just accidentally."

The playwright explains that the Canadian government adopted a different attitude toward working with its native peoples than that in the United States.

"The Canadian attitude was to dominate the Indians but not to kill them," she explains. "In the north it was important to keep the Indians who trapped the beaver for the Hudson's Bay Company. Historically it was a more benign colonialism, but it was no good for the Indians after a while."

Dreis says that she enjoys portraying characters in addition to developing them.

"It's not by accident that I'm a character actress," she observes. "When I was little I was in many different homes and had to learn to fit in, like a chameleon."

With Periwinkle in tow, she has taken her production around Western Canada. The FORMER peninsula Delia Dreis wrote and staged Prairie Winds in Canada. She will present it at Cherry Hall in Carmel Thursday through Saturday, Jan. 14-16. Curtain is at 8 p.m. (Mac McDonald photograph).

costumes and props for "Prairie Winds" she stashes in a battered valise.

"This production is 'suitcase theater' in the literal sense," Dreis muses.

"It's not a play but a series of vignettes, in a sense it's a dramatic poem," she adds. "This is what I want to do — present live history instead of dead dates."

'It was very, very difficult to survive. If we had any clue how many people came to the prairie and died, we would probably be aghast.'

In the spirit of the early settlers, Dreis charges no admission to her production, although donations are welcomed.

"People are charged to death. I don't like people to be locked in to do something," Dreis claims. "This is a story about a pioneer era when people shared and I want people to share in this. It's part of the pioneer spirit to share."

Jungian symbolism in astrology addressed Friday in Carmel

EXPLORING what it is that the stars say in terms of the symbols that are used in Jung's psychology will be the focus of a discussion based on the book Jungian Symbolism in Astrology.

It will be presented at 7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 15 at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

The event is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung, an informal group of people who share an enthusiasm for the writings of the Swiss psychiatrist. The public is invited. Prior registration is invited but not required. A donation is suggested.

The book was authored by Alice O. Howell, a professional astrologer. It is composed of letters written by her to Jungian analyst Sylvia B. Perera over a period of years, who states in her introduction that the book provides a rich introduction to the understanding of astrology, inviting and companioning the reader's approach to the depths which the planetary symbols reveal. Most importantly, Ms. Howell has grounded her explanations of those symbols in examples from her personal life and from those of her clients... Thus she enables her readers to learn a style of bridging the transpersonal symbol to living human experiences. This is essential to the study of any symbols system or it remains an abstraction, a mere set of ungrounded word signs or keywords.

Discussion leader for the event will be Meigra Sweeney of Pacific Grove, a student who employs astrology as an adjunct to her work as a massage therapist and dreambodyworker.

Taking the role of "devil's advocate" will be Joseph Pagano, M.A. of Monterey, a certified practitioner of Process-oriented psychology and dreambody work.

For details; call or write 649-8809; 853 Pacific St., Monterey.

SOVIET director Lana Gogoberidze will introduce her new film, Turnover, to be screened Sunday, Jan. 17 at the Village Theater in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Soviet filmmaker screens 'Turnover' in Carmel

AN AWARD-winning Soviet film, Turnover, will be presented in Carmel on Sunday, Jan. 17 in conjunction with the upcoming Monterey Film Festival.

Directed by Lana Gogoberidze, Turnover is set to show at the Carmel Village Theater. Gogoberidze, 59, will be in attendance to introduce the film, which is about two women who, following a chance meeting, renew the bonds of an old friendship.

Following the film, a reception will take place at 8 p.m. at Carmel's La Playa Hotel, the event's sponsor. Tickets for the film and the reception are available at the Monterey Film Festival office for $25. Individual tickets for the film only are available for $5, and can be purchased in advance or at the box office that evening.

The Carmel showing follows the national premiere of Turnover in San Francisco, and is presented in conjunction with "On Screen '88," a production of Northern California Women in Film & TV.

Joining Gogoberidze in Carmel will be Maya Turowskaya, 57, a major Soviet film critic and historian. Both women are being sent to On Screen '88 as guests of Goskino, the official Soviet film distribution company.

Gogoberidze said Turnover allowed her to "speak from my soul's perspective and my perspective as a woman about life. The world generally knows about men's points of view on relationships between men, between men and women, and between the society and the individual."

Gogoberidze adds that it is vitally important that women present their point of view.

"It is a view," she says, "which has been denied too long, to both men and women, and I believe society will be fuller, richer, more human, when women's input is fully realized."

ARTS & LEISURE

Gogoberidze's younger daughter appears in a supporting role in the film, which won Gogoberidze the directors' prize at the Tokyo International Film Festival. In Turnover, critics have hailed Gogoberidze's ability to depict the characters with just a few strokes and to bring forth their full-scale emotions.

The four-day Monterey Film Festival, set to run Feb. 18-22, will feature award-winning films from around the world, including a tribute to Soviet filmmaking, and a Life Achievement Award presentation to actor James Stewart.

Additional information about the Jan. 17 showing of Turnover and the Monterey Film Festival, can be obtained by calling the festival office at 649-8887.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

The people's songs

"MY OPPONENTS can have the newspapers," Thomas Jefferson once remarked. "Give me the people's songs."

The knowing quote pops back to mind as American hearts — or some of them — celebrate the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr.

Who except the great (saints wherever they may appear plus some few artists) knows anything about greatness? One large paradox: they themselves call it another thing. What one may say about Martin is that he rode his ticket all the way to the end — even when he apparently saw violent death coming. ("I have been to the top of the mountain," he declared shortly before the gunman blew him away — he had been there and now was not afraid.)

This is a jazz column, after all — so what's his connection to the music? Well, Martin understood Jefferson's point so well — the Deep South Freedom Drive held itself together with faith and song. If you look at old videos of his major speeches, the man had staffers standing in front of the rostrum, facing him, counting time, sparking the call-and-response tempo and internal structure of both Sanctified Church meetings and jazz groups from Congo Square till now.

More, Christianity was a way for people to survive slavery; jazz was another step — the public expression of how the people were adjusting to ostensible Emancipation. When Emancipation proved to be a matter of words only, jazz artists described and challenged The Great Lie. Martin did the same. It wasn't just niceness that led countless jazz figures to back Stevie Wonder's campaign for a national holiday round the person of Dr. King.

Congo Square. That was the place in New Orleans where slaves were allowed to dance the old African dances. Seeking to keep the lid on that specific population, organizers of those tribal hoedowns (the slave owners and city officials) unknowingly permitted revolution of historic size. New Orleans was a major port; all kinds of folks watched and sang along with the dancing. So Congo Square also was the place where subtle and complex African rhythms began to fuse with German march music, Spanish ballads, Creole folk songs. Jazz was developed in the red light district called Storyville. Its birthplace — Congo Square.

The revolution? An artistic medium via which an entire people could hear and express the utter (underground) truth about their experience in this land. Martin led onto the streets the verities which had been kept alive and refined by jazz players for generations. Jazz serves as keeper of the flame. Always has done so and hopefully always will. And today the open secret transcends color lines. As co-owner Alan Schultz of KRML Jazz Radio once remarked: "It is not possible for a racist to live this music."

IF THE above paragraphs have done their job, Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood's forthcoming autobiographical film about Charles (Bird) Parker will be recognized as an important event. Bird, you see, found Bebop in his guts — and Bebop was the primary public signal that urban Blacks no longer would accept the conditions of pre-World War II America. In the Round Midnight film, Dexter Gordon delivers such a telling observation: Bebop was developed by men who couldn't make it in the segregated United States Army. True.

And Mayor Eastwood took the challenge by explicating their leader — Bird.

Johnny Adams, dean of Monterey Bay Area jazz broadcasters, served that production as music consultant and bit player. He has put together a special hour about his experiences with/in the filmmaking process. To share his inside view, dial KRML (1410 AM) at 4 p.m. on Friday, Jan. 15.

IT'S MY BIG fun to be producing occasional jazz events with manager Teri Waros of the Sheraton Hotel's Monterey Bay Club. The basic notion: assemble unusual combinations of musicians. The first such gig will occur in that space on Wednesday night, Jan. 20.

The program's called "Two Bass Hit" because it features two fine bassists on the stand at the same time — Brian McConnell and Stan Poplin. Pianist Biff Smith and drummer Andy Weis complete the lineup.

First set kicks off at nine. No cover. No minimum.

FINISHING OFF one observer's "Best Of" picks for 1987

Instrumental Jazz Album: Sonny Rollins Plays G-Man. From Milestone Records in Berkeley, this package demonstrates again and again how the great artist can afford to be witty as well as lyrical and fiery by turn. Sonny's bandmates complement his various moods perfectly: pianist Mark Soskin, Clifton Anderson on trombone, Bob Cranshaw's electric bass, Marvin "Smitty" Smith the drummer.

Two of the three Rollins compositions are so long (15:05 and 11:10) that they've had very little jazz radio airplay nationally. For the at-home listener, however, this would be a fine choice. Mark Soskin's one of the funniest players since Thelonius Monk.

Instrumental Jazz: Double Image from Contemporary Records. It's a duo album with alto saxist Frank Morgan and pianist George Cables. A student and close friend of Bird Parker, Frank Morgan today offers a tone of immense beauty. Fellow jazz writer Bill Minor says it this way: "He breaks your heart." Blues, Latin things, lilt standards — all put forth with exquisite taste.

Vocal Jazz Album: Without question, Dianne Reeves on Blue Note. Producer George Duke pulled together a powerful session — Herbie Hancock, Stanley Clarke, Freddie Hubbard, Tony Williams, George himself and Paulinho da Costa among the backup players — and Miss Reeves met the challenge. Her off-tempo reading on a warhorse ballad — That's All — shows perfectly how a jazz vocalist must be able to "jump off" and improvise and make it back to safety. Pianist Billy Childs both dares and supports her throughout.

Herbie and wife Jean Hancock (lyrics) are represented by a haunting and most literate ballad. Also Ellington, Jerome Kern, Stevie Wonder, Eddie del Barrio — and Dianne herself as a strong lyricist.

A much-published poet and arts commentator, John Detro does the morning "Jazz Tides" show over KRML Radio — 9 a.m.-noon Monday-Friday and 6-11 a.m. Saturdays. His specialty show entitled "Student Jazz" runs between 11-noon Saturdays.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joanne Tenenbaum

The Acting Company staged 'Five by Tenn'

THE ACTING Company's Five by Tenn, a retrospective of Tennessee Williams' short plays, played one evening at Carmel's Sunset Theater Sunday night, bringing to the peninsula a finely crafted production peopled with first-rate performers.

The five plays are bridged with connecting material about the playwright's life and work, accompanied by projected screens, which neatly mask scene changes while introducing the play to come.

The production, directed by Michael Kahn, who has worked with Williams, has a coherence born of Kahn's in-depth understanding of the material and its context.

The five short plays give voice, each in a different way, to the desperation of people who are "lost in the city." Some are drowning in alcohol, others are forgotten, broken, or abandoned. Williams' gift for lyrical language and empathy for his characters focuses, not on the circumstances of the characters' lives, but on their illusions about themselves and their intense longing for a different life.

The Lady of Larkspur Lotion is a gentle one-act in which two characters, a down-and-out woman (Alison Stair Neet) and a drunken would-be novelist (Spencer Beckwith), match their grandiose, self-protective illusions against the harsh realistic demands of their angry, unpaid landlady (Constance Crawford).

In Talk to Me Like the Rain and Let Me Listen, an alcoholic wakes up from a bender and asks his wife (Laura Perrotta) to comfort him with words. She responds with a lyrical speech in which she expresses her idealized yearning for a different life, a life without the pain and stress of alcoholism. At the play's conclusion it is clear that her words themselves are the balm of her existence and the only effective action she will take, despite her great longing.

Portrait of a Madonna, a 1944 piece that foreshadows A Streetcar Named Desire, dissects the mentality of an aging southern belle (Constance Crawford) who imagines herself to have been romantically abandoned and has lived her life replaying that illusion. In a part any actress would kill for, Constance Crawford turns in a delicate, masterful performance.

This Property is Condemned is a wonderful short piece that successfully mingles despair and hope in the short encounter of a young girl (Oni Faida Lampley) and boy (Oliver Barreiro). The girl weaves a tale for the boy that makes light of her life's greatest misfortunes — her abandonment by her parents, the death of her only sister. Like the house in which she is holed up, she is abandoned and forgotten, nourished only by her illusions and her ungovernable hope. Oni Lampley's sprightly performance lights up the piece.

In The Long Goodbye a young writer (Peter Lewis) plays out his sorrow for the failed family and way of life he must leave behind him.

Williams' dialogue is rich in verbal music and insight into the human spirit, but what makes his work so memorable and enduring is his tenderness and compassion for people, whatever their circumstances and illusions.

Free classes introduce Sunset Center yoga series

Two free yoga classes will introduce the winter season of yoga taught by Phyllis Haffner at Sunset Center, Carmel, on Monday, Jan. 18.

The first class meets from 5:30 to 6:45 p.m. and is especially for beginners; the second, for intermediates, meets from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Both classes meet in Room 17, the middle building on 10th Street. Participants should wear comfortable, flexible clothing.

Beginners will learn several classic yoga postures and breathing techniques which relieve tension and restore energy after a busy day, as well as beginning to develop flexibility and strength for better health and fitness.

Intermediates will practice linking familiar yoga postures in flowing series, coordinated with breathing, to facilitate the flow of energy through the body and increase strength, flexibility and endurance. Stilling the mind to focus on the body and the breath makes each asana a meditation.

Regular classes meet on Monday and Thursday evenings; students may enter at any time and may attend either one or both days. The cost is $5 for one class or $25 for six classes, which may be taken within a period of two months.

For additional information, call 375-2364.

Phyllis Haffner has been teaching yoga at Sunset Center for three years and previously taught in Cincinnati, Ohio. She continues her own yoga studies at the Kali Rae Yoga Academy in Santa Cruz.

The four week run opens Thursday, Jan. 14 and will conclude Feb. 6. Performances are at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays, with matinees scheduled at 2:30 p.m. on two Sundays; Jan. 24 and 31.

Seating is limited in the Indoor Forest Theatre, located at Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel-by-the-Sea. Tickets are $8 for adults and $6 for students and senior citizens. Reservations may be made by calling 624-1531 or 649-5561.

Box & Cox, The Skylight Room

Unicorn Theatre Presents offers a comedic double bill at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center in New Monterey. Robert Colter, Sandy Williams and Carey Crockett co-star in John Maddison Morton's Box and Cox. Additionally, Sandy Williams will read The Skylight Room, a classic tale by O. Henry.

Performances are scheduled at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, Jan. 14-16.

Tickets are $6 general, $4 for students and senior citizens. Group discounts are available. The comedies are staged at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center, located at 320 Hoffman (off Lighthouse) in New Monterey.

For reservations call 649-5561 or 649-6852.

The Olio Revue

The Olio Revue, an old-time variety show that features songs, dances and melodramatic skits, can be viewed at California's First Theatre.

Olio Revue is presented at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through January at the historic theater located on Pacific Street at Scott in Monterey.

Tickets are $6 for adults, $5 for seniors and teens and $4 for children 12 and younger. For information, call 375-4916.

Film travelogue visits Hungary

THE STORY of the country as only a native could tell it, Hungarian Homecoming is a feature-length travel-documentary film to be presented on Friday, Jan. 15 at Sunset Theater. It will be presented at 2 and 8 p.m.

Matthew Mentes, the photographer of the film, was born in the city of Budapest, the heart of Hungary. In its setting on the banks of the Danube, the capital is a reminder of 2,000 years of history. Although the citizens of today live among busy freeways and high-rise apartment buildings, they flock to the old Roman baths on weekends and they worship in a church where Hungarian kings were crowned for more than 600 years.

In the countryside most of the farmers now work on huge modern cooperatives but the villagers cherish their traditions. On the plains, the cowboys still look after herds of horses and in the hills, women still wear their traditional costumes to church. Everywhere young people are learning the old folk dances that their grandparents knew.

Industry, too, shows the blend of old and new. The extremely modern Izzo-Tungstram factory manufactures many of the light bulbs used in the United States while at the Herend Porcelain Works, fine china is hand painted just as it was when Herend made dinnerware for Queen Victoria.

Whether vacationing at Lake Balaton, attending a fair on St. Stephen's Day, or just relaxing at home, the Hungarians know how to enjoy their country. In a film filled with affection and humor, Sherilyn Mentes invites you to share it with her.

Reserved seating is available. Tickets are $5. For more information call the director's office at Sunset Center, 624-3996.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joe Guzaitis

Victorian hijinks

UNICORN THEATRE has taken advantage of the after-holiday lull to launch its first 1988 production. They have chosen a daffy little piece called Cox and Box by that almost entirely forgettable British playwright John Maddison Morton. Also presented is a dramatic reading of an O'Henry short story about penurious working girls trying to find affordable lodging: a fit companion piece to the play. The reading is not only an easy way to extend a program, but a way to remind audiences of the power of a good story, well read, on the imagination. Indeed, I found the reading so captivating, that I would like to have heard several short pieces, read by different members of the cast.

Speaking of the cast: there were familiar faces at every turn. Most familiar was Sandy Williams, a long term veteran of the local stage, whose recent roles include the mother in Buried Child and the outraged doctor in The Normal Heart. Robert Colter, who recently made us laugh in several one-act plays at SRO, plays Mr. Box. Carey Crocket plays Mr. Cox: he has been involved in many aspects of theater locally, especially set design. Diane Clippinger, who plays Penelope Ann, comes to us from a successful season in the Boise Rep.

Besides giving us the charming O'Henry reading, Sandy Williams plays Mrs. Bouncer, the greedy proprietress of the rooming house in Cox and Box. She has arranged it so that Mr. Box, a printer who works through the night, and Mr. Cox, a hatter who works all the day, share the same room, thus yielding her double rent. Mrs. Bouncer must scurry around after each of them to pick up the telltale traces of each gentleman's occupancy and keep it from the other. However, nobody's perfect: she loses track of things like matches, candles, coal etc., which seems to be continually disappearing. She doesn't mind this housekeeping too much because it allows her to snoop on her tenants as well. When Cox or Box inquires as to the fellow who is always coming up the stairs when the other is going down the stairs, he is told that "It's the chap what lives in the attic."

This goes on for a while until Mr. Cox gets a half-day off and comes home to find, you guessed it, Mr. Box in his flat acting as if he belonged there. After much snide conversation, they discover that not only have they been warming the same bed, they are both engaged to Penelope Ann! Now things really get interesting, but I can reveal no more.

Sandy Williams's Mrs. Bouncer is the fulcrum of the play, balancing the two men off against each other. Carey Crockett's hatter is suitably prissy and played with much fun. Robert Coulter's printer is a cranky curmudgeon — good counterpoint to the hatter. These three achieve a nice ensemble quality for much of the play. As for Diane Clippinger, her Penelope Ann is always outside the action, evanescent, even ethereal.

The set is by Carey Crockett and consists of an ornately furnished room where an antimacassar might be found. Lighting was designed by Lance Jacobson and ably operated by Sky Rapaport. Lady Ramirez has served up a collection of period costumes suitable for the piece. The gentlemen wear similar formal outfits, that seem proper for a hatter, but for a printer? I suppose he could be in management. Mrs. Bouncer's dress is appropriate for a Victorian landlady, topped as it is with a shawl. Penelope Ann's fiancee frock, with its beaded bodice, is breathtaking.

In all, this was a good inaugural for Unicorn Theatre.

Note: Nick Zanides will be directing Arthur Miller's All My Sons at the York School Theater, opening in a few weeks. Those of you who saw Nick's production of The Price last year at York, will know how well he directs Arthur Miller and you also know why I'm so excited. These productions at York School are the biggest sleepers on the peninsula. If you want to see serious drama played very well, don't miss these offerings. Drive a little, enjoy a lot.

CRITIC AT LARGE

By Mac McDonald

The Best (and Worst) of Times

EVERY YEAR at about this time (actually earlier), critics release their Best 10 lists for the previous year and I'm not about to buck a tradition.

There's only one problem. As a "critic" of nothing in particular and everything in general (Critic at Large allows me that freedom — or is that lack of commitment?) it's hard to put out a Best 10 list. Best 10 what? Films, recordings, plays, books, restaurants, nightclubs, microwave popcorn, sleeveless shirts, running shoes, Halloween costumes??

Actually, when you think about it, it's not much of a problem, because I can wax poetic on anything I want to. But in the interest of brevity I'll stick to films in particular and filmmaking and filmgoing in general. So here goes.

Top 10 Films of 1987: (Disclaimer: The Monterey Peninsula is notorious for its dearth of "quality" films, especially the so-called "small" film or foreign films. And when we do get them they're either commercial hits too, show up only on videocassette several months later or are on a now-you-see-'em-now-you-don't basis. As of this writing several films (including bona fide Oscar contenders), have not opened yet on the peninsula...if they ever will. But more on that later. Films are in alphabetical order.)

1. Broadcast News.
2. Empire of the Sun.
3. Good Morning, Vietnam.
4. Moonstruck.
5. My Life as a Dog.
6. River's Edge.
7. Roxanne.
8. Stakeout.
9. The Stepfather.
10. Tampopo.

My Second 10, for what it's worth (several of these could have been tied for 10th, but hey, that's cheating, right?): Radio Days, Tin Men, The Untouchables, La Bamba, Black Widow, Swimming to Cambodia, Planes, Trains and Automobiles, The Big Easy, RoboCop, The Singing Detective. (Technically, The Singing Detective is a British television serial — six one-hour episodes — but it has the look, sound and feel of a long feature, and it did win the Golden Gate Award at the 1987 San Francisco International Film Festival.)

What makes putting together a Best 10 of 1987 list from the peninsula is that many films that would normally qualify haven't opened (or never will) in area theaters. These include The Dead, Hope and Glory, Manon of the Spring, The Last Emperor, Dark Eyes, House of Games, Matewan, Housekeeping, Maurice, Cry Freedom, Prick Up Your Ears, Shy People, Ironweed, etc. etc. You get the picture. Two of the films on my Best 10 list (Moonstruck and Good Morning, Vietnam) opened in sneak previews only last weekend.

What the peninsula tends to get week in and week out, are either the big commercial blockbusters (Beverly Hills Cop II), the teen comedies (Teen Wolf Too, Revenge of the Nerds II), and the sure things with not much more going for them save big names (Hello Again, The Running Man). Every now and then a good film will sneak by theater bookers and — lo and behold — generally get good responses. Two oases in this vast wasteland are the Dream Theater and Monterey Institute International Film Series, which consistently bring intriguing, hard-to-find, award-winning and challenging films to the area. The Lighthouse Cinemas deserve Honorable Mention for their attempts to enlighten while entertaining.

Which brings me to my annual No Name Awards (because they don't have catchy monikers like Oscars or Grammies), for the best and worst of the year in filmdom, both locally and on a wider scale:

Best Theater: Without a doubt, the Dream Theater surpasses any other theater in the area (even Cinema 70) in terms of comfort, class, visibility, film selection, and quality of its concession stand. The upstairs room (Dream II) leaves a little bit to be desired, but it's not that bad.

Worst Theater: Tie between the Hill Theatre, a Quonset hut with seats, and upstairs at the downtown State Cinemas, a torture chamber with a screen. The latter should be condemned.

Best Video Store: Tie between Movie Mart in Pacific Grove and Video Express in downtown Monterey. Flash, class and trash. Good balance between commercial hits/new releases and the off-the-wall and hard-to-find. Any store that carries Nice Girls Don't Explode and the '60s trash classic The Trip, can't be all bad. Honorable Mention to Carmel Video for being good guys and knowledgeable movie buffs. In addition, The Wherehouse in Monterey does have a small, but decent foreign film section.

Worst Video Store: Let's not go into it.

Film Event of the Year: Monterey Film Festival.

What Have You Done For Us Lately Award: To David Bean and Bill Mann, who helped pull off a successful inaugural film festival only to get unceremoniously bounced.

Critical Overkill Award: Ishtar and Harry and the Hendersons got savaged by the critics, the former deserved it, the latter didn't.

Best Soundtrack: Tough choice, but La Bamba gets the nod over The Big Easy, Dirty Dancing and Good Morning, Vietnam.

Above and Beyond the Call of Duty Award: Michael Caine, Cher and Richard Dreyfuss — workaholics all, and all acquitted themselves well this year. But Michael, Jaws IV??

It's About Time Award: Albert Brooks and Christine Lahti are getting their due after years of fine work.

Wearing Out Their Welcome Award: Whoopi Goldberg, Eddie Murphy, Bill Cosby and Madonna.

Just Desserts Award (Director's Category): Bill Forsyth (Housekeeping) and Barry Levinson (Tin Men, Good Morning, Vietnam) also getting their due after years of fine work.

No Mas, No Mas Award: Death Wish IV, Superman IV, House II, Revenge of the Nerds II, Teen Wolf Too, Howling III, and worst of all Leonard Part VI. Thank god we weren't subjected to Leonards Part I through V.

Welcome Sight Award: The return of "adult comedy" with films such as Roxanne, Stakeout, Moonstruck, Broadcast News, Tin Men, Baby Boom, and Good Morning, Vietnam.

Welcome Sight Award II: Continued strength of British films and filmmaking: Hope and Glory, Maurice, Wish You Were Here, Prick Up Your Ears, Withnail and I, etc.

Unsung Heroes Award: To the Monterey Institute International Film Series for consistently bringing quality films here that would otherwise go unseen; and Dwight Marshall, for his involvement in the aforementioned group and with the Monterey Film Festival.

Best Video Non-Release of the Year Award: Platoon. It's still in litigation.

Most Obvious Attempt to Snare an Oscar Award: Barbra Streisand in Nuts.

Movie to Stay Tuned For Award: Bird, Clint Eastwood's latest, is about sax great Charlie "Yardbird" Parker, and should be out late spring or early summer. Only the second Eastwood film in which he didn't also star. Forrest Whitaker stars.

See If You Can Follow This Scenario Award: For all the bizarre (what else can they be called?) goings-on with the Monterey Film Festival in the past year.

Which Hat Should I Wear Today Award: Mikel Pippi, executive director of both the Monterey Film Festival and Frohman Academy.

It's been that kind of year, folks! And remember, the Golden Globes and Oscars are coming up soon.

South African, Hindi films screened

The Monterey Institute International Film Series will present a drama from South Africa and a comedy from India.

Place of Weeping will be shown Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 15-17. The film is a 1986 drama which portrays the harsh inequities endured by black farm laborers in a small farming community in Weenen, South Africa. It is also the story of a brave black woman who dares to fight the apartheid privileges of a white farmer.

The Householder will be shown Wednesday, Jan. 20. Directed by James Ivory, the film is a comic account of how two young Indians come to grips with the realities of their arranged marriage. The 1963 production will be screened in Hindi with English subtitles.

Both films begin at 8:15 p.m. in Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren, Monterey. Admission is $3.50 general, $3 students, $2.75 senior citizens.

"WHAT IS A HAND-COLORED,
ONE OF A KIND, LIMITED EDITION PENCIL REPRODUCTION?"

From the original pencil drawing which G.S. Hill completes after approximately 10 to 160 hours per drawing, a black and white photo negative is produced. The photo of the drawing is then offset printed on Ivory paper in black ink. The edition's range from 100 to 250 prints per drawing and each print is hand watercolored, signed, titled, numbered and logged by Mr. Hill.

The pencil gives a very detailed image of the many pleasing subjects G.S. Hill finds on both East and West coasts. The water coloring adds soft and subtle hints of color. Each print varies slightly in tints and highlights.

We are proud to present the entire collection either in oak framing or unframed and shrink wrapped for the works protection. All prints come double-matted and are hand-beveled cut in Ivory chosen for the outer mat and black for the inner mat.

"Mission Ranch" exhibit
coming the end of January.

PEWTER CRAFTSMAN

John Somers will present a lecture on "Pewter on the Utrecht" at the Carmel Art Association. The 17th century Dutch sailing ship was discovered in 1981 off the coast of Brazil, its hold filled with a treasure of pewter pieces. The lecture will begin at 7 p.m.

Shipwrecked pewter comes to light during CAA lecture

John Somers, a premiere pewter craftsman, will be lecturing on "Pewter On The Utrecht" at the Carmel Art Association at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 14.

Raised in England, educated at Eaton, Somers emigrated to Brazil in the late '50s, drawn, he says, by the "allure of the tropics." Establishing himself there as an antiquary, he developed an interest in old pewter, so much so that in the mid-'60s he decided to become a pewter maker himself.

Dedicating his life to research and replication of the classic styles in pewter design in the 14th through 18th centuries, Somers duplicated and improved on the ancient methods of handcraftsmanship.

In 1981, the wreck of the Dutch sailing ship "Utrecht" was found off the coast of Brazil. Sunk in 1648, the remains of its hold contained a treasure of pewter pieces affording a unique opportunity for study and analysis.

Somers spent nearly five years identifying, restoring and reproducing this collection.

His illustrated lecture at the Carmel Art Association will chronicle that discovery and his replication of those historic and beautiful pieces.

For more information, call the Carmel Art Association at 624-6176.

City accepts grant applications

The Carmel Community and Cultural Commission is accepting grant applications for money to be allocated by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea to community groups for social service and cultural grants.

The commission will review the applications and make recommendations to the city council. The council has allocated funds for the grants this year but is not obligated to provide any specific amount of money to any applicant.

All applications must be submitted to the director's office, located at Eighth and San Carlos, Carmel, in the Sunset Center building by 3 p.m. Friday, March 11. No requests will be considered after that date and time.

Additional information and application forms are available from the director's office at Sunset Center, P.O. Box 5066, Carmel-by-the-Sea, CA 93921.

Workshops offered by The Friends

The workshops presented by the Friends of Photography's Education Department have received a substantial increase in financial support over previous years. A grant from the California Arts Council offers support for workshop faculty honoraria and staff salaries.

Increased support from the Eastman Kodak Company will allow The Friends to accomplish many new goals, including bringing three international photography figures to the workshop program.

William Klein of Paris and Pedro Meyer of Mexico City will join other faculty members to lead the workshop The Photograph as Document, and Eikoh Hosoe of Tokyo will be part of the Ansel Adams Workshop faculty.

Many more full- and part-tuition scholarships will be made available to individuals needing financial assistance to attend the 1988 workshop program.

For more information, write Workshops, The Friends of Photography, 101 The Embarcadero, Suite 210, San Francisco, CA 94110 or call (415) 391-7500.

Citicorp Savings seeks entrants in state-wide calendar art contest

CITICORP SAVINGS has announced the start of its 1988-89 Calendar Art Scholarship program which, since its inception in 1977, has awarded nearly $90,000 in cash scholarships to high school art students statewide.

The only program of its kind, the Citicorp Savings' Calendar Art Scholarship competition is open to all Ninth through 12th grade students in California. Entrants are required to submit an original pen and ink drawing of a local point of interest, such as a landscape, distinctive structure or historic area.

A jury of independent art educators and professional artist selects 25 semi-finalists from the northern, central and southern regions of the state. A second jury selects 13 finalists and one grand prize winner from among the 75 semi-finalists.

The 14 finalists' drawings will be featured in Citicorp Savings' 1989 Art Scholarship Calendar distributed free-of-charge at Citicorp Savings' branches.

The grand prize winner receives a $2,000 cash scholarship, and the finalists each receives $500 cash awards.

Citicorp Savings also donates $100 to the art department of each finalist's high school.

Competition entry packets and instructions are available at Citicorp Savings branches throughout California, as well as at most public and private high school art departments. Last year, some 1,200 students participated.

Entries, with official documentation, are due at Citicorp Savings' branches by Friday, April 8.

Citicorp Savings is an Oakland-based, federally-chartered savings and loan with assets of nearly $7 billion, and more than 140 branches throughout California.

Own a Little Piece of All Outdoors

"Little", of course, is a relative adjective. If someone were to offer you 7.7 acres in Carmel for $350,000, you'd say that's "big" and you'd grab it. That's not about to happen, but...there is a perfectly beautiful 7.7 acre site out in Carmel Valley that is priced at $350,000.

It's 1½ miles east of the Valley Village, past Los Tulares, past Stone Pines, just before you come to Sleepy Hollow. It's several hundred feet frontage on Carmel Valley Road, rises gently to a building site perhaps 50 feet above the road, then more steeply to a magnificent site at the top of the knoll. Most of the land is clear. There are a number of graceful oaks dotted about the landscape. A road has been cut across the face of the knoll, bringing you to the commanding view point at the top.

The lower site already contains a caretaker's house, a low, natural wood cottage with 2 bedrooms, 2 baths, a large living room, attractive kitchen and a 2-car garage, 1275 square feet in all. It's fairly new (6 years), equipped with all the comforts, and a great place to stay while building the major house on the heights. It has a well, a Cal-Am connection and solar heating.

This is a spectacular location. From the top of the knoll, you look across a forested area, over the winding Carmel River down below, past a number of beautiful houses perched on hilltops and far away to the soaring Santa Lucia Mountains that rim this spread of "all outdoors."

The "lots" that are your neighbors' are variously 10 acres, 10 acres, and one which is 48 acres. The entire area is zoned for 5-acre minimums, so there will always be a sense of space, a communion with nature, a feeling that you do, indeed, own a piece of all outdoors.

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 49

Anyone who thinks that equality for women in business is a new idea just hasn't heard about ABBIE J. HUNTER. She had it going nearly 100 years ago in San Francisco. There, in 1889, she organized and operated a business called The Women's Real Estate Investment Company. Just how this reacted on her male competitors is left to your imagination. In any case, someone (another woman!) sued her for "misappropriation of funds." Eventually she was acquitted and turned her attention to Carmel. She learned that Mr. S.J. Duckworth was having problems with his development here, made him an offer he couldn't refuse and became his partner. Her merchandising approach was quite different. She extended Ocean Avenue down to the sea, caused a rather elaborate bathhouse to be built on the beach, and built a boardwalk from the bathhouse to the Pine Inn, newly built at the corner of Monte Verde. She directed her effort to selling lots north of Ocean and west of Junipero. Possibly because she was under-capitalized, or the Southern Pacific failed to extend its line, or she was just too early — whatever, the project failed and she tossed the torch (and land) to Messrs. Devendorf and Powers in 1902. Many ladies have joined the real estate ranks here since ABBIE, and they probably owe her a hug.
